

DEMOCRATS ARE TO MEET IN DENVER

PARTY WILL TAKE A STRONG
STAND THAT REFORMS
BE BY LEGISLATION.

NOT BY ONE MAN POWER

President Roosevelt's Third Term
Declination Is a Real Sensation
In Washington.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Denver, Colorado, is the place and July 7th the time for holding the Democratic National convention next year. There was splendid unity of the Democrats in selecting the time and place for the convention and on the issues for the coming campaign.

The Democracy will take a strong stand that reforms must be by legislation, and not by a one-man-power in the federal government.

President Roosevelt's third term declination is a real sensation here. He was forced to make the statement by his party leaders. The Clayton resolution against the third term would pass congress by a large majority and the President's party leaders told him that it would not be suppressed.

Secretary Cortelyou is Wall street's presidential candidate till further orders.

Washington, Dec. 13.—After deciding to hold the next Democratic convention at Denver, July 7, 1908, the Democratic National committee late Thursday entered a spirited debate on the propriety of accepting more of the $100,000 offered by Denver for the convention than is actually needed to pay the convention expenses in that city. The opposition to the acceptance of the contribution took the form of a resolution, by Representative Clayton of Alabama, declining the money not actually needed for convention purposes. But after a long debate the resolution was laid on the table by a vote of 21 to 14.

Mr. Clayton, Representative Williams of Mississippi, and Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia, all spoke in favor of the passage of the resolution. Mr. Smith was especially emphatic in saying the $100,000 which had been offered to secure the Republican convention and refused by the national committee, had been offered to and was about to be accepted by the Democratic committee. He said the Republicans had turned down the offer because it was regarded as in the nature of a bribe and that Democrats, in view of that circumstance, could not afford to accept it. Mr. Williams spoke in similar vein, as also did Mr. Clayton.

Mr. Taggart advanced the acceptance of the $100,000, saying it would be needed now even worse than money was needed in 1900, and that at that time it would have been practically impossible to have opened headquarters for Judge Parker if they had not had the extra money secured from St. Louis, where the convention was held.

Senator Stone of Missouri made a long speech in which he favored the acceptance of the money.

Mr. Clayton declared that the acceptance of this money would be in line with the very practices in campaign contributions that had been condemned by the committee.

This view was antagonized by Senator Stone, who declared that the transaction was open and aboveboard, and this was not to be compared with any of the propositions that had been condemned. Many people, he said, would go to Denver, and the young and growing city was glad to make this contribution for the advantages it would receive. The money, he said, would be badly needed in starting the campaign.

Mayor Tom Johnson advocated the acceptance of the money offered by Denver. He said the money for campaign purposes is contributed by corporations with the view of securing advantages in legislation or otherwise, while the contribution of Denver could not be ascribed to any such purpose. The people of Denver, he said, have a regular organization for the purpose of attracting conventions to the city for business reasons, and it was perfectly proper for the Democratic National committee to accept the offer.

Senator Tillman opposed the acceptance of the money. "Let the local Democratic organization of Colorado," he said, "have the money to fight their next campaign. Guggenheim can be depended upon to furnish the money for the Republicans. Now give the Democrats of Colorado a chance and let them use the money to return Senator Teller."

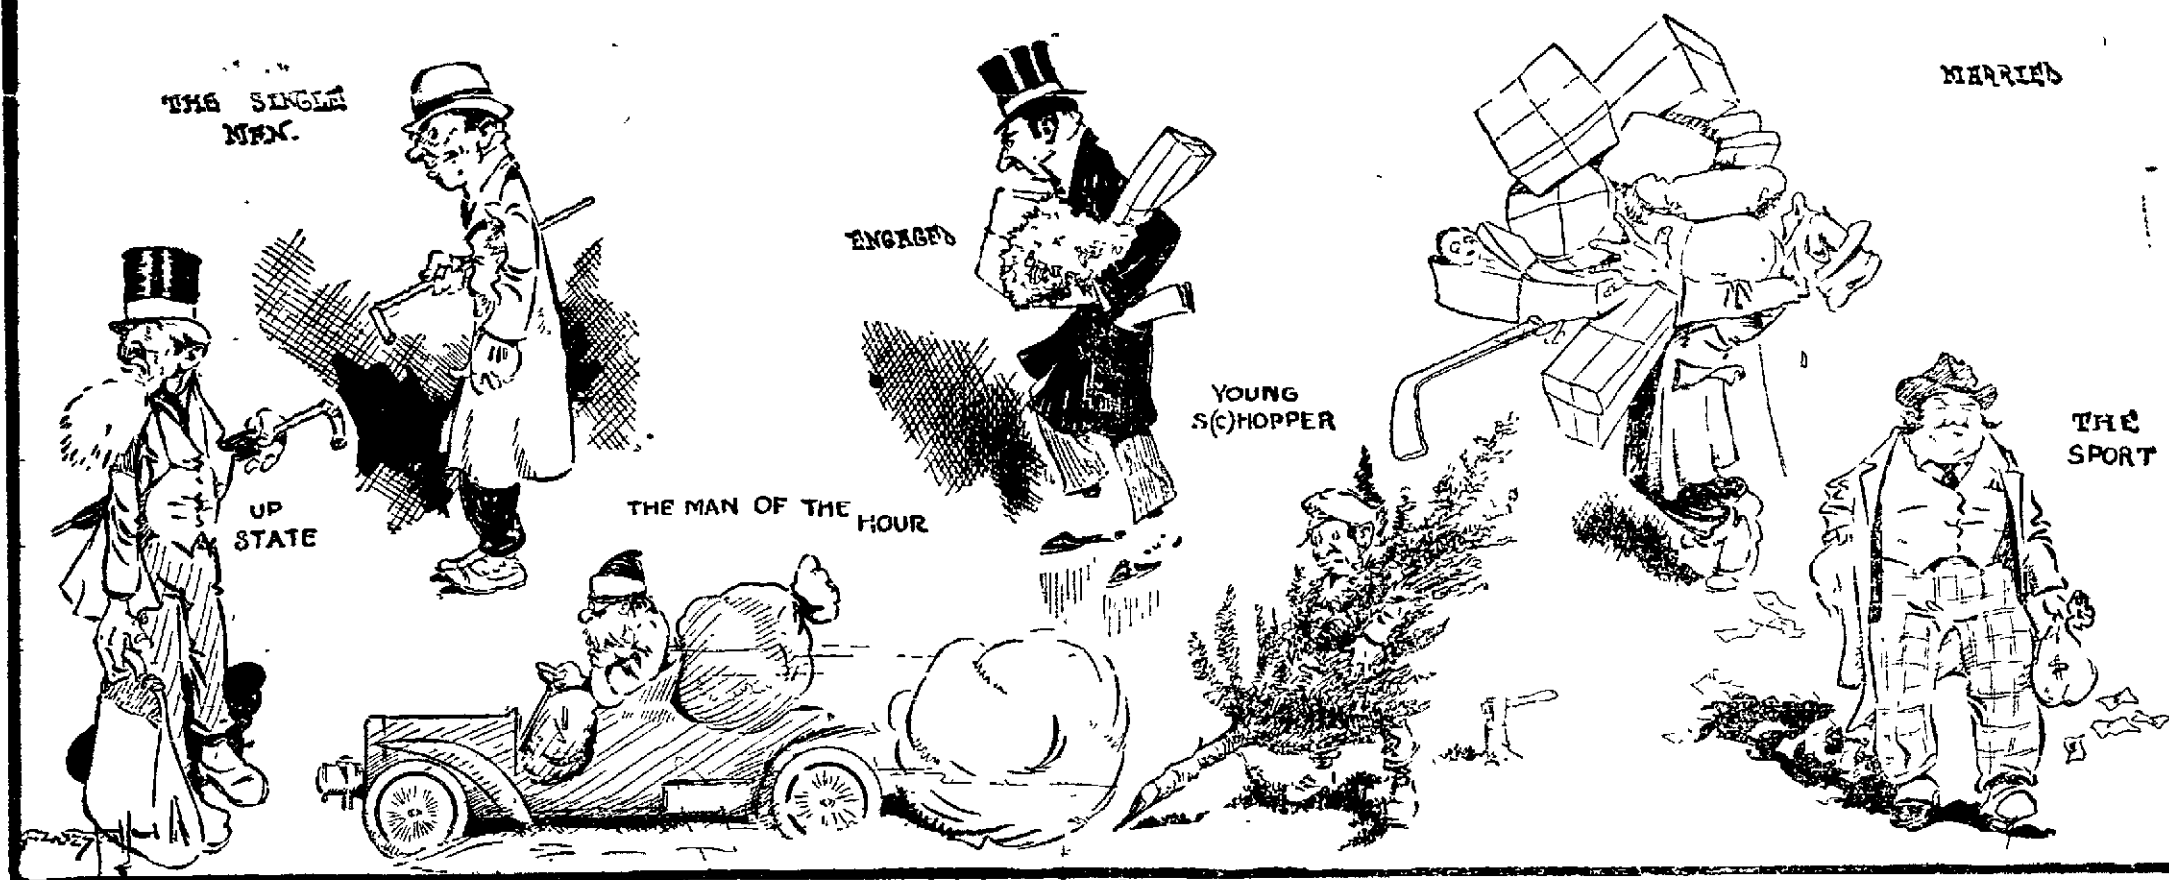

Mr. Tillman, however, voted against the motion to lay the resolution on the table.

Mayor Dahlman of Omaha, expressed the idea that the money could be profitably employed in opening the campaign, and said he had no doubt that Denver had made its proposition in good faith, and that it could be accepted in the same spirit in which it had been made.

Charles F. Wilson assured the committee that Denver had no desire to appear as unduly influencing the committee.

The motion to take Mr. Clayton's resolution was made at the conclu-

OFFICIAL PAPERS DELAYED MURDERER STAYS IN ANNEX

Columbus, Dec. 13.—John Soloy, the Cleveland murderer, who was the object of Governor Harris' clemency on Wednesday evening, was confined in the prison annex all day Thursday, even though he was granted a commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment. It was not until late Thursday afternoon that Soloy was given out of the death chamber and given his place in one of the regular tiers.

"This delay came about through the failure of Warden Gould to receive the official papers, telling of the commutation. On Wednesday evening, immediately after Governor Harris had granted the commutation, the papers were mailed to the warden.

When the document did not reach the prison, Thursday morning, little was thought of the matter, as it was not then known at the institution that the papers had been mailed the night before. All through the day Warden Gould waited for the arrival of the paper, and, when the evening shades began to gather, Governor Harris was called up by phone.

"I had the papers mailed directly after I reached my decision," said the governor. "I can't imagine what's gone wrong."

In order that Soloy might not be detained longer in the annex, the governor's messenger, Howard Gillard, was dispatched to the prison with new papers. Soloy was then transferred.

BALD HEAD IS "EXHIBIT B" IN HERITAGE DIVORCE SUIT

Camden, N. J., Dec. 13.—A bald head is the latest in the way of exhibits to be offered as evidence in a divorce suit. The hairless pate belongs to Benjamin Heritage, whose wife is suing for divorce. The shiny bald spot on his head has been marked "Exhibit B."

One of Mrs. Heritage's charges is that her husband, while brushing his hair, became angry with her and hit her with the brush. The defense promptly offered Heritage's head with a scant fringe of hair about the ears, in evidence to prove he had no need for a hair brush.

"Do I understand the bald spot is offered in evidence?" queried Vice Chancellor Learning, at the hearing.

"We do, and mark it exhibit B," answered Heritage's lawyer. "But we will ask the other side not to compel us to leave the exhibit with the clerk."

This was agreed to and Heritage took the bald spot home.

322 BODIES FOUND

Monongah, W. Va., Dec. 13.—At noon today no additional bodies had been removed from the mines and the total recovered is 322. Twenty funerals were held here this morning.

Among the finds reported by rescuers last night was a basket full of dismembered limbs which can never be recognized.

CHILD LABOR LAW IS HELD INVALID BY CIRCUIT COURT

St. Clairsville, O., Dec. 13.—The Circuit court here has held the state child labor law invalid, in the case brought against the Roderick Glass works at Bellaire, charging with employing boys after legal hours.

The Common Pleas court had upheld the law. The attorney general was represented at the hearing. All three circuit judges agreed that the law is unconstitutional.

CROWS ATTACK HUNTER WHO SHOOTS AT FLOCK

Freeport, Ill., Dec. 13.—Paul Miles, a hunter, was attacked by an enormous flock of crows near here Thursday and barely escaped with his life.

Miles fired into the flock, wounding several, and the others attacked him. The man started to run, but was knocked down and pecked about the face and eyes and beaten almost insensible by the birds' wings. With the greatest difficulty he crawled to a nearby barn, with the birds fighting him all the way, and it was not until he was inside that they desisted.

Miles is in a critical condition.

FLEET NOW READY

Washington, Dec. 13.—"I have the honor to inform you, Mr. President, that the battleship fleet is now ready to sail." Such was the notification given in person to President Roosevelt today by Acting Secretary of the Navy Newberry. The President expressed his pleasure that the orders for preparation for the journey to the Pacific had been carried out so promptly. Secretary Metcalf of the navy is ill and may not be able to help the President to send the fleet away next Monday.

SUNBURY FARMER SLASHES THROAT

In Desperate Attempt at Suicide Because of His Son's Long Illness. He Will Recover.

Columbus, Dec. 13.—As the result of attempting to take his own life because of the illness of his son, Fred Gammill, a farmer residing near Sunbury, is now confined to a ward in Mt. Carmel hospital, suffering from a severe gash in his throat.

Last July Mr. Gammill's son was injured in a runaway at Sunbury. He was brought to Columbus twice and discharged as cured, but, just recently physician declared that he would have to be brought to Columbus a third time. The father has been brooding over his son's condition for some time and Wednesday afternoon attempted suicide by slashing his throat.

He was hurried to Mt. Carmel hospital and it is thought that he will recover. Mr. Gammill is 45 years old and has a wife and several children.

Charles Burnard, 23 and Ella Allen, 24, both of Reynoldsburg, were licensed to marry Thursday.

NO MONEY FOR XMAS GIFTS; KILLED WIFE AND HIMSELF

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 13.—G. M. Colby this morning murdered his wife and took his own life because he could not stand the thought of "only ten more shopping days till Christmas," when he had nothing with which to buy presents. He tried to induce his wife and daughter to let him turn on the gas and kill them all. They refused. While his wife was preparing breakfast, Colby pounced upon her from behind. The daughter tried to fight off the father but her mother had returned with help. Colby had slashed his wife till her head hung by a thread. Colby had then cut his own throat.

TALK TO GIRLS

Mrs. Lydia C. Ward Tells Them to Marry and Gives Other Good Advice.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Girls, always think of getting married. Don't let every fellow that comes along kiss you. Don't let any man kiss you until you are engaged to him. Don't marcelle your hair. Don't wear 'rats. Don't giggle at every trifle. Don't be ashamed of your home life.

Mrs. Lydia Cooney Ward, society leader and author, in her annual address to the 800 or more girls of the Wedell Phillips High school, told them that getting married was one of the most beautiful things in life and they should bear it in mind throughout their school days. Her remarks were "for girls only."

"I hope not one of you girls" will be an old maid," said Mrs. Ward, "but you should not take up every young man who comes along. Be discriminating in the choice of your company. You don't want to marry the man who wants to kiss you the first time he is with you."

The speaker then gave the girls hints on dressing neatly, avoiding most of the fripperies of the present time. She advocated simplicity in living and clothing.

Japanese Ambassador Aoki assures his friends prior to returning to Tokyo that there is no likelihood of war between Japan and Uncle Sam.

Every time Pritchard got leave he ran down to Washington. Every time the Annapolis crew raced—the big middle rowed at No. 3—Miss Von Haake waved her blue and gold flag and cheered.

But the romance was not taken seriously, because it would be years before Pritchard reached a rank with salary enough to support a wife. And the girl was regarded only as a child.

A year and a half ago young Cathcart met Miss Von Haake in Philadelphia. He was then a student in the University of Pennsylvania. He took a small part in athletics, too, but he is by no means the striking figure Pritchard is.

Immediately Cathcart took a place in the train of admirers that followed the pretty Washington girl. He made many trips to the capital and soon became her accepted suitor. No one in his home town of Newburgh, however, knew anything about the affair. Cathcart is a reticent, reserved young man. He was then about 23 years old.

On the morning of June 22 of this year, it was announced in Newburgh that the son of the millionaire would be married the same evening in Washington. Only a few persons from the river town were in the secret. The ceremony was performed in the Von Haake home. The bridegroom's brother, Oswald Cathcart, was best man. The bride's chum, Miss Helen Brett, of Washington, was her attendant. An invitation was sent to young Pritchard, who was then on short duty, having graduated from the Naval Academy. But he did not appear. He bade Miss Von Haake goodbye, though, the day before the wedding.

A few days later Mr. and Mrs. Cathcart, jr., arrived at the parental home in Newburgh. Soon afterwards Miss Brett arrived. Then the Cathcart and his wife, but they became the Hotel Palomar.

Suddenly, after a 10 days' stay in the hotel, Mrs. Cathcart and Miss Brett disappeared. That was on July 13. They have not returned to Newburgh since. There was a slight disagreement between young Cathcart and his wife, but they became fairly well reconciled later.

About the middle of September he met her in New York by appointment, and they went to Jersey City to board a train for Philadelphia, where they were to visit a relative of the young man. Cathcart left his wife for a moment, and upon returning could not find her. He searched the Pennsylvania Railroad station, but

SWEETHEARTS HAVE ELOPED AFTER YEARS

ROMANCE CULMINATES IN THE DISGRACE OF A NAVAL OFFICER.

DROPPED FROM NAVY

Ensign Pritchard Stole the Wife of Another, and Department Took Immediate Action.

New York, Dec. 13.—A divorce suit is soon to follow the dismissal of Ensign Earl W. Pritchard of Indianapolis, from the United States navy for running away with the wife of another man.

Despite the efforts of the government and all concerned to hush up the affair, it became known Thursday that the beautiful girl with whom Pritchard eloped is Mrs. Alma Marie Von Haake Cathcart, of Newburgh-on-the-Hudson.

The young husband from whom the bride was stolen is R. Harry Cathcart, jr., son of a millionaire patent medicine manufacturer, of Newburgh, and himself prominent in the business and social life of that town.

He admitted that it was his wife who had fled with the handsome ensign. He will not take her back under any circumstances, he declares; and, in fact, he has already retained a lawyer to bring suit for divorce.

In the meantime, Pritchard and his stolen sweetheart are missing. The ensign was dropped from the navy rolls last Friday. "For the good of the service," the complaint against him was made by the mother of the girl he carried off in Lock-Inn fashion.

She is Mrs. Adolph Von Haake, wife of a retired officer of the Prussian army. It is said she went to President Roosevelt with her story, she and her husband being warm friends of the Roosevelts. At all events there was unusual activity in investigating the charge and much promptness in dropping Pritchard.

The beginning of the romance dates back about three years. Alma Marie Von Haake was then 18, and one of the most popular girls in the younger army set in Washington. She lived with her parents at the fashionable apartment house.

She was a dainty, vivacious girl, with a striking mass of chestnut hair, and an attractive manner of glowing. Among the scores of admirers who besieged the Von Haake home was Earl W. Pritchard, then 21 years old. His athletic figure, more than 6 feet 2 inches in height, was notable even among the Washington crowds, where there are so many big, erect men. He was then in his second year at Annapolis, having been appointed by Congressman Overstreet of Indiana. His home was in Indianapolis.

Every time Pritchard got leave he ran down to Washington. Every time the Annapolis crew raced—the big middle rowed at No. 3—Miss Von Haake waved her blue and gold flag and cheered.

But the romance was not taken seriously, because it would be years before Pritchard reached a rank with salary enough to support a wife. And the girl was regarded only as a child.

A year and a half ago young Cathcart met Miss Von Haake in Philadelphia. He was then a student in the University of Pennsylvania. He took a small part in athletics, too, but he is by no means the striking figure Pritchard is.

Night School for Foreigners.

The Y. M. C. A. has another project on foot that from all appearances will be entirely successful. Their plan is to teach foreigners, Hungarians, Roumanians, Poles, Slavs and all other nationalities that so desire, the English language. The lessons are cheap, $5 for five months, and two classes meet twice a week. The first class was held Tuesday night with an enrollment of ten. This evening the number had increased to 16, and many more will probably present next week. The classes are held in the basement of the Y. M. C. A. and Prof. S. Otto Williams, principal of the High School, has been engaged as instructor. The success of another teacher will be required before long.

FAUST IS COMING.

It will be welcome news to many theater goers in the city, the announcement that the famous play of Goethe's immortal "Faust" will be presented here on Christmas day, two performances, at the Auditorium, the Porter J. White company. No play written in many years has retained such a hold on the hearts of the public. It has proved to be far better than the book, for while the play has steadily held its popularity, the book is now almost forgotten. It was revived in New York city last spring and actually drew larger audiences than it did at the presentation of the original production years and years ago. This great play will continue to entertain as long as we have laughter to reward wit, tears for the sorrowful, and sympathy for the fallen. It is still as fresh as the newly minted coin and has the fizz of the sparkling champagne.

MORE CONCERNING FOREIGN COLONY

Many of the Roumanians and Hungarians Have Nicely Furnished Homes and Live on the Fat of the Market Affords.

The Advocate several days ago contained an article telling of the exodus of a number of foreigners from this city who are leaving for their native lands, many of whom will remain there while some will return in the spring to again resume work in this country. It also told of their industrious habits and manner of living.

A number of the facts were furnished the reporter by Theo. Simross, president of the Foreign Exchange bank, and some of the foreigners have taken exceptions to that part which described their manner of living. They evidently have been misinformed or else had the article misquoted to them, as it certainly was not the intention of Mr. Simross to disparage any of their actions. Instead he has nothing but words of praise for them and states that many of the Hungarians and Roumanians with whom he is acquainted live in nicely furnished homes which are kept clean and exact, the ladies are good cooks, and their tables are filled with everything good which can be found on the market.

An extract of the former article stated that to economize many of them clubbed together and hired a housekeeper who did their cooking and looked after their rooms for which she was paid the sum of ten cents per day a piece by those for whom she cooked. This sum of course does not include their board, as they buy their provisions and meat themselves. It is simply the amount which they pay the cook. Where clubs board in this manner they can afford to have a greater variety and a larger quantity.

The reporter has visited several of these boarding places and always found that the food was clean and wholesome and the men were well taken care of. Many of the Hungarians and Roumanians who decide to make this country their adopted home make good and law-abiding citizens.

THE NEWARK BANKS.

The Newark banks are worthy of the confidence and support of every citizen. While financial institutions elsewhere during the recent Wall street panic went on a "paper" basis and refused to pay in coin of the realm, business proceeded in Newark in the good old-fashioned way and every demand for cash was promptly met. Loans were made as usual and not one of the building associations took advantage of their privilege to require 30 days before paying depositors.

Some immense payrolls were paid in Newark, while money was exceedingly "tight" elsewhere, and where practically all of the large city banks, and many in small towns, were on a clearing-house basis, paying in scrip, every Newark manufacturer got gold and silver from the local banks for his payrolls.

The financial condition prevailing here in Newark has attracted the attention of bankers and business men all over the State, and much favorable comment is heard everywhere. Manufacturers in other towns who had trouble in getting cash for their payrolls are looking towards Newark and while their attention is directed this way the many advantages of Newark as a manufacturing city should be presented for their consideration.

The Advocate a few days ago printed as statement from every bank in Newark. The figures show a very gratifying condition.

Winter, that is the real thing, doesn't get here until December 21, but the advance agent who arrived last night gives assurance that the King will come on schedule time.

Senator Davis of Arkansas, smashed all precedent in his fiery speech of Wednesday as new senators are supposed to remain quiet and let the older statesmen do the talking. Mr. Davis could see no reason why he should sit still till his hair turned gray. He made a few remarks that made the whole country sit up and take notice.

The Newark stores were never more attractive than they are today. Stocks were never larger or more inviting, and in the past few days the Christmas business has been going with a whirl. For your own advantage, to say nothing about considering the clerks, buy now. Don't put it off.

JOHN T. GRAVES

Suggests That Bryan Follow Example Set by Roosevelt and Decline to Run.

New York, Dec. 13—John Temple Graves, in the American today makes the suggestion to Mr. Wm. J. Bryan that he follow the example of Mr. Roosevelt in declining himself out of the presidential race, leaving a fair field for other and newer candidates. He contrasts the open fight promised in the Republican convention with the position of the Democratic party which stands, he thinks, predestined to select the Nebraskan. He then pictures the situation as it might be if Bryan would eliminate himself. Delaware and a "militant east," he thinks, would advance Judge George Gray, Maryland would present Senator Rayner, Tom Johnson of Cleveland Governor Folk of Missouri, Congressman Champ Clark and Deardmond from the same state might

CHILLINESS EXISTS BETWEEN CORTELYOU AND PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Government officials are today anxiously waiting to see what will turn up at the office of the secretary of the treasury. That a chilliness has grown up between the President and Secretary Cortelyou is the common report around Washington, but the gossip differs as to the cause. Some say that the President sat down on the secretary's political aspirations. Others assert that the President "jumped" on Mr. Cortelyou for playing in with the wall street banking crowd and the anti-administration coterie of the Republican national committee. Many politicians expect to see Cortelyou resign.

Mr. Cortelyou this afternoon refused to discuss the rumors that he would resign. His friends, however, deny the report and say that the secretary is still friendly with the President and that he has as good a right to be a candidate for president as Secretary Taft.

OBITUARY

MRS. PHOEBE McMILLEN.
Phoebe Bird was born in Blooming township, Morgan county, August 7, 1830, died December 10, 1907, aged 77 years, 4 months and 3 days. Her childhood days were spent in Muskingum county, where her parents moved a short time after her birth. She became a member of the Methodist church early in life and was a faithful and earnest worker. She came to Licking county in the year 1855 and the year following was united in marriage to William B. McMillen. Of this union five children were born, Martha Jane and Franklin Howard, who preceded her, Mary Elizabeth, John Andrew, William Albert, one brother, Mr. John Bird, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Jarrett of Caldwell, O., survive to mourn a dear mother and sister.

HARRY DAVIS.
The funeral of Harry Davis, who died at his home on Hoover street, took place Friday afternoon from the home, and was under the auspices of the local branch of the International Association of Machinists, of which he was a member. The interment was made in Cedar Hill cemetery.

EVE LAKE.
As the morning sun was rising on the 4th day of December A. D. 1907, to open and illuminate this day, Christ's arms were open to receive a "Mother of Israel," whose spirit winged its flight to answer the call, "It is enough, come and be with me." While it seems very hard to us to give up those we love but in the spirit which prompted our Lord to say in his last moments "Not my will, but thine be done," we must humbly submit.

Eve Lake, nee Hursey, was born March 25th, 1829, and departed this life December 4th, 1907, aged 78 years, 7 months and 9 days.

She was united in marriage with Maximilian Lake in 1849; as a result of this union, ten children were born. She was a true, loving and affectionate mother.

We miss her safe counsel and godly example, but her Lord said, "It is enough, come up higher, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." While our tears will flow we mourn not as those who have no hope, for Aunt Eve was a dear, good woman to know her was to love her; she had no fear of death and said, "I shall be at home before another winter has passed by."

She united with the Baptist church May 26th 1877, and lived a true consistent member until her death; in her late sickness all was done that could be done by loving hands to make her comfortable, and it was without avail; her gentle spirit winged its way into the immortal beyond. She had braved the storms and endured the trials of life for more than man's allotted time has met the last enemy, and has gone to await the resurrection morn.

While we mourn, we believe she is basking in the sunlight of God.

CARD OF THANKS.

The children of Mrs. Phoebe McMillen wish to thank their friends and neighbors and also the employees of the express office for their kindness and sympathy during their bereavement and also for the beautiful floral offerings.

POLICE NOTES

Sheets Taken to Hospital After Night in City Prison—Eleanor Robinson Robbed.

The police department has received word that while Eleanor Robinson was playing "Salome Jane" in Cincinnati in November, she and Miss Ada Dwyer were robbed of a valuable collection of jewels. In all a string of pearls, nineteen diamonds, ranging from 3-4 to 3 karats, and some other jewelry was stolen. The case is in the hands of the Pinkerton Detective Agency and the police have been asked to co-operate with them in the search of pawn shops.

John R. Sheets, claiming his home as Stockport, was picked up by the police last night and locked in the city prison. Sheets went to the Franklin hotel, registered, paid for his room and requested the clerk to keep five dollars for him. During his wandering around he fell and injured his left hip. The limb pained him all night and this morning he was taken to the City hospital in the patrol. An examination showed that the hip was not fractured as was supposed, but that there was simply a contusion. He came to this city for the purpose of visiting his relatives, two brothers and a step sister, Mrs. Laura Johnson of 37 Williams street. During the war of the Rebellion Sheets served in the Union army and at the battle of Gettysburg was shot twice through the left leg.

TURNED ON GAS AND HE IS DEAD

Jacob Wolfarth, former captain of the Mansfield police force, was found dead in his bed Wednesday evening. Asphyxiation by gas was the cause of his demise. It is thought that he got up to get a cigar and then went back to bed and fell asleep. The gas was turned on so strong that the small stove could not consume all of it. The funeral will probably occur today under the auspices of the Order of which order he was a member.

POLITICAL CHAT FROM CAPITAL OF BUCKEYEDOM

Columbus, Dec. 13.—As previously pointed out in these dispatches, no changes were made in the politics of the general assembly through the election. There were five vacancies to be filled and in each instance men of the same faith as their predecessors were elected.

In Licking county R. W. Howard was elected to succeed Congressman Ashbrook in the state legislature.

Granville Moore, Republican of Ashtabula, succeeds D. W. Baldwin, who is now a member of the state board of public works. Mr. Moore really is a "big" man in politics—or anything else for that matter, for he is more than a six-footer and "Big Jim" Williams, senator from Cuyahoga county, will have to go some to maintain his laurels.

William T. Smith, Democrat, is the successor to Dr. A. C. Criswell, deceased, Marion county. Smith announced early in the campaign that he was opposed to county local option and in a three-cornered fight he won out by a plurality of about 700.

In Lawrence county, Dr. A. C. Lowry, Republican, was elected to succeed Carmi A. Thompson, now secretary of state.

In Clermont county L. W. Hatch, Democrat, was elected to succeed Dr. Stevens, deceased.

While the results of the municipal elections did not seem to be a surprise to the voters of the respective cities, those unacquainted with affairs in all cities did not look for a confirmed victory for anti-lid candidates in the larger places.

Of course, the anti-lid interests always are stronger in the cities than in the smaller places, but up to this time they have not scored quite such wide spread and decisive victories.

"Lid" and "anti-lid" were issues prominent in the cities and more or less alive in numbers of small towns in Columbus the fight was avowedly lid and anti-lid. Four newspapers of this city attacked the Republican candidate on the ground that if elected he would permit the town to run wide open. The Democratic candidate, Judge Duncan, came out boldly on a lid issue. The fight waged fiercer than ever before in the history of local politics. Candidate Bond was charged with being a liberal league selection, a brewery representative, a saloon favorite and corporation controlled. He never made answer to a charge.

The Democrats made their campaign fight "Duncan and Decency," and Bond was elected by more than 5,000 votes. The present incumbent, Judge Badger, Democrat, was elected by about 3,000.

Much to the surprise of everybody, Mr. Bond announced that he favored law and order, and that the laws would be enforced. The Anti-Saloon league, which took a leading part in the fight, is in a quandary over Mayor-elect Bond's attitude.

In Toledo, Mayor Whitlock, Independent, was re-elected over Democratic and Republican adversaries. The issue was straight out lid and anti-lid. The Anti-Saloon league opposed Whitlock, but their efforts were fruitless.

In Cleveland the Anti-Saloon league took a stand for Congressman Burton as against Mayor Johnson. The latter was re-elected by more than 9,000 majority. The lid issue was not the predominating one in the Cleveland campaign, but there's no doubt but that anti-lid sentiment gave Johnson enough votes to defeat Burton.

In Cincinnati, the most liberal of three candidates, Colonel Markbreit, won by an exceedingly large majority.

According to the daily papers the lid issue entered into a score of elections throughout the state, and from that same source it is learned that the municipalities in the elections voted their sentiments as follows: Piqua, lid; Troy, anti-lid; Kenton, anti-lid; Euclid, lid; Stenbenville, anti-lid; Napoleon, anti-lid; Lorain, anti-lid; Coshocton, lid; Sandusky, anti-lid; Bellefontaine, lid; Shelby, anti-lid; Marietta, lid; Mt. Vernon, lid; Wooster, anti-lid; Bryan, lid; Canton, anti-lid.

Anthony Moran was elected for the thirty-fourth consecutive time as assessor of Union county. His predecessor, Horatio Burnham, held this office continuously for this number of years, and it was Mr. Moran's wish that he be nominated and elected in order that he could hold the office as long as Mr. Burnham. This makes only two assessors in Union township in 68 years, both being Republicans.

The retirement of Hon. B. W. Baldwin of Ashtabula from the house means there will be a vacancy at the head of the finance committee, at the opening of the adjourned session. Hon. Frank A. Hoiles of Stark, who is serving his second term, and has been vice chairman of the committee, will probably be a candidate for the first place at the head of the table, and so far as known there will be no opposition to his promotion. Hoiles is editor of the Alliance Review, and one of the working members of the house.

W. P. Rogers, dean of the Cincinnati law college, delivered an interesting address on the subject of "Local Self Government" to a large and representative audience in the University of Cincinnati recently. Elliott Pendleton, leader of the city party; Charles Follett, recent candidate for vice mayor on the Democratic ticket, many Republicans-elect on the late municipal ticket, and other prominent citizens were present. The speaker said in part:

"Next to the home, that which makes most for the well or woe of any community is its local government. Our comfort, happiness and well being find their basis largely resting back upon our relations with local affairs. Municipal government is the greatest problem of our times. One hundred years ago not more than 1-25th, or four per cent of the population of the United States, lived in cities. Now more than one-third of our people make their homes in cities and towns.

"The purpose of this address is to advocate for these centers of population and wealth more power and independence in self-government, more freedom from legislative control, more of the privilege of exercising those powers which belong to communities as of right, because they are communities of free men and women who have voluntarily located themselves together in the belief that in these particular places they can secure most of happiness.

"The legislature may be composed of men above the average in intelligence and business capacity, yet most of them know almost nothing of the needs of communities which differ from their own. It is supposed that all power lies with the people, and this is true. But the people often find that this power has been wrested from them and molded into laws which fetter and bind them, preventing the exercise of their highest and most sacred privileges. Under such conditions it is the plain duty of the people to assert their rights. The rights which are nearest the people and which will present the most fertile subject for discussion and legislation in the next decade are to be found under the title of local self-government for cities."

After the address, in an informal talk, it was urged that the difference of opinion arose not so much upon the propriety of "self-government" as upon the degree of latitude to be applied to the word "local." The speaker was asked would he extend it to the county, or confine it to the city as a unit. He replied, "The city by all means." Dr. Dabney, president of the University, remarked "the smallest unit possible was at all times preferable."

There is a report over in the Sixteenth Congressional district that Hon. Marshall N. Duvall of Jefferson is debating in his mind whether he shall stand for the nomination for lieutenant-governor or be a candidate for congress to succeed Hon. Capell Weems of Belmont, who has lifted himself out of the race. In either case Senator Duvall might count on the opposition of the friends of Hon. J. J. Gill, for it will be recalled that Duvall was the enemy of Gill at all stages of his strenuous political experience in the district. During the last session of the assembly Senator Duvall went on record in favor of the Howe referendum and initiative resolution, and he may have to explain that vote in the convention.

Carl Schuler, member of the legislature from Montgomery county, is a candidate for speaker pro tem of the Ohio house of representatives. He is now serving his second term in the general assembly, and is one of its most popular members.

It is now generally admitted that Freeman T. Eagleson of Guernsey county will be chosen speaker to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Carmi A. Thompson, elected secretary of state in 1906. Mr. Eagleson is the present speaker pro tem. Others than Mr. Schuler who seek Mr. Eagleson's present office are Judge Noah J. Deyer of Scioto county and W. F. Roll of Warren county, a third-term member George Little of Greene county is urged by friends to enter the race, but thus far has refused to do so.

FRANK M'HUGH

Young Pugilist Well Known in Newark Is Paroled from Ohio State Penitentiary.

Columbus, Dec. 13.—Franklin McHugh, the former Cincinnati pugilist, well known in Newark, was last night paroled by the Board of Penitentiary Managers, in company with Walter, alias "Kid," Baxter and Floyd Clark. Early last year they held up a cripple and robbed him of $1,200. McHugh and Baxter were given six years each and Clark four.

The board also paroled George Letcher, the Fulton county freebug, sent up in June, 1905, for five years for wholesale incendiarism, committed 25 years ago. Joseph Moss of Jackson county, sent up for six years in December, 1905, and John Niederkom, sent up for five years in November, 1905, for shooting with intent to wound, were likewise paroled.

SWEETHEARTS

Sylvania Railroad station, but she was gone. Then soon he began to suspect that Pritchard was responsible for her disappearance. He had suspicions they had been communicating with each other since the marriage of the ensign's sweetheart.

A message sent to Sweetheart revealed the fact that Pritchard likewise was not to be found. Then young Cartwright notified Mrs. Von Hauke, his mother-in-law, and she is said to have gone directly to the President with the whole story.

As the result of the investigation ordered by Secretary of the Navy McCall, Secret Service men are said to have discovered that on the night of October 31 Pritchard and a woman were registered in the Hotel Henry, in Pittsburgh, as man and wife. They turned in as evidence a photograph of the hotel register, page on which the names were written. Pritchard's dismissal then followed a week ago.

SKELETON AT HIS FEAST

A Thing of the Past for a Portland, Me., Man.

Many a person in Newark sits down to a table laden with good things, but a staring skeleton at the board warns them that they satisfy their appetite at their peril. This skeleton of indication has become a phantom of the past to many persons who have restored their digestive organs to a normal condition by taking out deleterious cod liver preparation, Vinol. Vinol is rich in alternative elements, which restores natural assimilation, and makes rich, red blood which in turn strengthens every organ in the body to do its work as nature intended.

Mr. W. E. Waterhouse of Portland, Me., writes: "I suffered so long with stomach trouble and indigestion that I lost flesh rapidly. Vinol cured me after everything else had failed. It strengthened my digestive organs, gave me a hearty appetite, and I can eat anything without the slightest distress. I do not believe any other medicine equals Vinol for stomach troubles and indigestion."

We ask Newark people who suffer with indigestion, and every weak, aged or run down person to try Vinol. If it does not help, we will return purchase money. Frank D. Hall, Druggist, Newark, Ohio.

HERE AND THERE

The temperature Friday morning at 6 o'clock was 14 degrees F.

"Well, they failed to land 'Old Wayne' again," said a snake hunter, who was talking over the recent case of the State against Wayne Pickle for alleged illegal fishing. Several of them were discussing the case and they all felt pretty jubilant over the State's failure to convict. "You men surely do not approve of illegal fishing, do you?" asked a bystander.

"Sure not," answered the gentleman from the pond, "it is to our interest to have the lake just full of fish as is possible, just as much as it is the public's." "Then why don't you quit netting the fish, if you do not want the pond depleted?" asked another man. "There is two sides to every question, and our side is as strong as the other fellows side. Now we have a law against the netting of fish and against the catching of them on a 'trot-line,' that, of course, is intended to stop the taking of fish in large quantities, and is good enough in itself, but the same people that the State hire to enforce the law, kill more fish by the way they handle the waters of Buckeye Lake every winter, than you can take in five years with nets.

"We live there and know the habits of the fish, and every fall when the water should be left at a decent stage, it is drawn down for the benefit of some improvement, sometimes a public improvement, but more often to let some private individual build his pier or a bathhouse. As the water recedes millions of small fish, whose instinct is not developed enough yet for their self-protection, are left to perish. The larger fish are often caught too in the shallow places, so when the pond gets frozen over they are frozen or suffocated. We have pointed this out many times to the officials, but with no success and the killing goes on every winter, so we feel that if the fish are going to be lost anyhow, we might as well get them when we can."

"The summer residents all profess to have the fishing interests at heart, and think of the 'snake-hunter' as a kind of a pirate, but they will buy a fresh-caught mess of fish as quickly as anyone and never inquire as to how the fish were caught, and if they were deprived of a few days' pleasure during the season by having the water drawn down for the purpose of making some improvement, the howl that would go up, would be heard all over the State."

"Yes, sir; if the fish were protected in a practical manner, we would be the first to help the officials. Any way, if the fish are so valuable, why don't the State hire some of natives to run things; people that know something about the conditions? We can handle it right, if they'll play fair."

That there is something in the fisherman's argument and suggestion that the "snake-hunters" be made warden, is evidenced by the fact that the United States has long since quit limiting the size of fish taken and other similar rules, but makes every sea fisherman a partner in helping to keep up the fish supply, by paying a bounty for under-sized fish that are replanted where they are most needed, and offers various other inducements for the toilers of the sea to help the industry. Prosecutions, except for foreign encroachments, have entirely ceased, and in an article that was recently sent out by the government, it was stated that fish that were nearly out of the market 12 years ago, are becoming plentiful again, and the small coast line fisheries are becoming important once again.

The day is past when you can drive people or enforce an obnoxious law, and it is very likely if some State official, who is possessed of a diplomatic brain, would get the alleged violators together and have a heart-to-heart talk, some law could be evolved or a practical arrangement made that would have the ef-

AMUSEMENTS

GOOD LAUGH AT AUDITORIUM.

One of the acts on the bill at the Auditorium Saturday afternoon and night, is the turn done by Messrs. Fuchs and Smith, representing an agent, in an airship and the many ridiculous things to be observed during such an ascent. The act has made a hit all over the country, and even Dockstader, the famous minstrel man, copied it a year ago in making his first appearance on the stage. The greater part of the Saturday bill is comedy, even a greater part of the motion pictures appealing to the humorous. For the children, ten dolls will be given away at the matinee performance, while at night, $5.00 in gold will be given to the person holding the lucky number. And all for 10c 20c and 30c, matinee 10c and 15c.

"WAY DOWN EAST."

Wm. A. Brady's "Way Down East," by Lottie Blair Parker, and elaborated by Joseph R. Grismer, is to be the attraction at the Auditorium, Monday evening, December 30, and that means a night of enjoyment for the theatre-goers of Newark, for the play is one of the wholesome, homely kind which appeals to the hearts. It is just a play with a story which is not new, but which is truly told in a charming manner.

PRODUCTION OF "FAUST."

The beginning of the fifth act shows us Faust and Mephisto toiling climbing the steep rocks and yawning chasms of the peak of the Brocken, in the Harz mountains, where, according to the German legend, the witches and warlocks meet on Walpurgis night (the thirteenth of April) to hold their yearly festivities. The night grows darker and darker; the moon is in its last quarter and gives but little light. They climb higher and higher; the trees and rocks and distant cliffs take on wonderfully fantastic shapes in the dim light of the dying moon; only the hooting of owls and the far-away cry of the lonely night hawk breaks the solemn stillness; strange shapes crawl to and fro, and weird snake-like forms seem to writhe and try to clasp the wanderers in their horrible embraces. At midnight a mighty tempest rises and the witches gather from far and near to their unholy festival. During the truly horrifying scene that follows, Mephisto shows Faust the never-fading "Punishment of Evil," and the "curtain falls with terror-stricken Faust writhing in the Evil One's grasp. A perfect storm of electric fire descends amid which the imps and witches are seen reveling in their diabolical merriment. The production will be seen here at the Auditorium Christmas afternoon and night.

"THE RIVALS," LAST NIGHT.

Joseph and William Jefferson, the sons of the late Joseph Jefferson, appeared at the Auditorium last evening in the old vehicle of their father's, "The Rivals." A fairly good house witnessed their efforts. The comedy, by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, offered opportunities for clever work, but William Jefferson, as "Bob Acres," was the only one in the entire cast that seemed to catch the life and air of his part. Maybe, because of the small house the others joined, but he worked and worked hard during the entire show. The "David" of Richard Lyie and "Mrs. Malaprop" of Miss Loretta Wells,

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Mr. Oscar Hammerstein received a cable dispatch from M. Pietro Brignole in London, confirming the statements that Mme. Louisa Tetrazzini, an Italian prima donna and sister-in-law of Mr. Cleofonte Campanini, had agreed to come to New York on January 15 to make her debut as a member of the Manhattan Opera company.

NO SNAPS AT NEW YORK

Although League Magnates Have Been in Session Three Days—The Cincinnati Problem.

The National league has been in session three days, and not a trade has been made, although some swaps may be pulled off today. The American league meeting, which only lasted two days, brought forth three deals.

Ollie Pickering goes to Washington and gives St. Louis Charley Jones. So the former Columbus outfielder passes into the control of his old friend, Joe Cantillon, while McAleer, in landing the former St. Paul garden tender, gets a great fielder but a poorer hitter than Pickering.

Ever since the explosion of Schmidt and Payne in the world's series the Detroit club has been looking for a catcher, and Jennings yesterday landed Ira Thomas of New York. St. Louis wanting a first baseman got hold of Arthur Brown, who was loaned to Montreal last year by Detroit.

"Derby Day" Clymer is brought to the front by the announcement that he is being mentioned again as the next manager at Cincinnati. A few days ago it was given out that President Herrmann would settle the Red managerial question this week, but it seems that he is unable to make good.

Barney Dreyfuss wouldn't give up Tommy Leach and went so far as to request newspapermen to cease gossiping about his player, through a star that the Pirate would ask increased salary next year because of the chance Dreyfuss made him miss. Reports from New York last night connected both George Stallings and Clymer with the job that is being so hard to fill. Another story direct from Cincinnati names John Gausel as the most likely man for the job.

BASKETBALL AT COSHOCTON.

The high school basketball team is practicing both after school and in the evening, in anticipation of the Doane academy game here, Friday night. Doane has the advantage of having played against the Denison university team, but even then the high school boys apprehend no serious trouble in defeating the visitors. Baskets have been placed in city hall and arrangements are being made for the game.

There is some talk of organizing a city team to play clubs and Y. M. C. A.'s of surrounding cities. A good team could easily be organized here, as there are several ex-high school stars who would be glad to play. Lenman, Deeds, Porter, Rogers and Shipp would make a combination that would cause others to sit up and take notice.

A track team is already talked of for next spring, and it has the endorsement of Prof. Bryant, who is a firm advocate of outdoor sport. Coshocton can get a creditable bunch of players together.—Coshocton Times.

DOPE FOR FANS

On a barnstorming trip this fall the Detroit Tigers, winners of the American league pennant, gathered in just $4.03 each. Such is fame. They might possibly have done better in Detroit.

Manager Grant of South Bend has resigned for 1908, which puts to rest the story that Marty Hogan may manage in the Central league.

"Kitty" Bransfield, first baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals, is spoken of as manager of the Milwaukee American association team next season.

The New York National league team is scheduled to go into training at Dallas, Tex., March 7.

Tom Daly, for a number of years a prominent ball player, and one of the members of a team which traveled around the world, is now cashier for a bookmaker.

The American association will hold its annual meeting in Chicago early in January. There has been talk of transferring one or two of the clubs, but it is likely the circuit will remain the same as last season.

By postponing the Central league meeting President Carson gives Canton a chance to attend the O. & P. league meeting at Cleveland. The original meetings were called for the same days.

The Tri-State league has established a new salary limit, and the coming season teams with a players manager must not exceed $2,500 while a team managed from the bench is limited to $2,800.

The teams now playing in the south are not drawing, and several will disband the first of the year, unless the box office receipts show a decided increase.

American association official averages show that George Upp of Columbus won 27 and lost ten games last season. "Rube" Geyer won 10 and lost 10. Both these men formerly pitched for Lancaster. Upp leads all American association pitchers.

Minneapolis is getting ready to present Sandow Mortes with the figure degree. The strong man assumed in every way and no league is capable of holding him up in a class A league.

THE AMERICAN AT CHICAGO

Doctors Waiver Laws Which Will End Getting Players for Outside Clubs.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—The annual meeting of the American league came to an end yesterday after the usual elections and appointments. Late in assembling, the club owners lost little time in winding up the routine business which remained for consideration, finding time also to pass a new rule, which it is thought will tend to abolish the practice of grabbing players for clubs outside the organization.

The new rule regarding transfers of players restricts the practice of securing a player by refusing waivers on him and then immediately turning him over to a club outside the league. It provides that if a club that obtains title to a player by refusing to waive claim to him shall, within 30 days, ask for waivers on him, he shall revert to the club which originally owned him, upon return of $1500, and the club to which he reverts shall for 10 days have the privilege of disposing of him to any club outside of the league without further request for waivers.

It is provided that if more than one club had refused to waive in the first instance, all such clubs, except the one returning him, shall have the right to refuse to waive the second time.

It is further provided that no change in the salary of such player shall take place for 30 days, and that advantage cannot be taken of the new rule until the player has been placed in regular service by the club securing him originally by means of the waiver provision.

JURY ENGAGED IN HEARING THE CASE OF STALEY VS. RICH-ARDS TODAY.

Motions for New Trials of Cases
Will be Heard December 23—
Court Budget.

The court and jury are engaged today in the trial of the case of Garmon Staley vs. Mary E. Richards. Plaintiff sues to recover $100 as compensation claimed to be due on the sale of real estate belonging to defendant. Staley, Fitzgibbon, Beem, Columbus.

Motions for new trials in cases tried will be for hearing December 23d.

In Common Pleas.

The cases of Harvey Maharg et al vs. O. E. Miller et al, Stephen W. Miles vs. O. E. Miller et al, Wm. T. Willey vs. O. E. Miller et al, were settled by the parties, without trial. Hunter, Kibler & Montgomery; Fitzgibbon, Hilliard.

Notice of Hearing.

In the case of Albert I. Frenier vs. E. S. Reed and others, the attorneys for the defendant, Jones & Jones, have notified the plaintiff that the motion to dissolve the injunction filed on December 13, will be pressed for hearing on December 21, 1907.

Motion to Dissolve Injunction.

In the case of Albert I. Frenier vs. E. S. Reed and others, the defendant, by his attorneys, Jones & Jones, have filed a motion to dissolve the injunction allowed in this case, claiming that the allegations in the petition are not true, except as admitted in the answer.

Guardian Brings Suit.

Jessie McClurg McMullen, guardian of Hugh McClurg, has commenced a suit in the Common Pleas court against William E. McClurg, executor of the estate of Perry McClurg, deceased. She says that she was appointed and qualified guardian of Hugh McClurg, aged 9 years, the father of her ward died January 25, 1902, leaving an estate valued at $4000, and that Hugh McClurg is the only heir. She says that on July 6, 1907, she presented a bill against the estate for the care and board of Hugh McClurg, from January 1, 1905, to July 1, 1907, for $700, which was rejected by William E. McClurg, executor of the estate. Plaintiff says that Perry McClurg, deceased, left a will, by the terms of which all the personal and real estate, except a legacy of $50 to Hugh McClurg, and except his debts, which were less than $500, was given and bequeathed to William E. McClurg, who now has possession and control of the estate. Plaintiff says that although William E. McClurg is possessed of all the estate of Perry McClurg, deceased, and although it is the duty of Perry McClurg out of his estate to support his minor child, William E. McClurg refuses to pay the bill of $700 or to admit his liability for its payment. Plaintiff asks judgment against him for $700. Fulton & Fulton, attorneys for Mrs. McMullen.

Circuit Court Meets.

The Circuit court is in session in New Philadelphia with Judges M. H. Donahue, of New Lexington, Frank Taggart of Wooster and the new member, J. W. Craine of Canton, on the bench. They have 14 cases for their consideration this term. This is Judge Craine's first visit to New Philadelphia in the capacity of jurist. They will cover the cases assigned for this term by Friday, unless unexpectedly delayed.—Ohio Democrat and Times.

Motion for New Suit.

In the case of Frank C. King vs. A. W. Claggett, the plaintiff, by his attorneys, S. L. James and E. S. Randolph, have filed a motion for a new trial.

SEARS TONIGHT

Great Humorist and Lecturer on the Platform at Taylor Hall, Y. M. C. A. Building.

Word has been received that Dr. Sears will be on hand for the lecture at Taylor Hall tonight. Dr. Sears' lecture "More Taffy and Less Epitaphy" is a sure cure for the blues. He is considered one of the greatest humorists and story tellers on the platform, and his eloquence and soul inspiration is not less than his great humor. This is one of those numbers it pays to hear. He is always remembered lovingly long after he has gone. Dr. Gunsaulus says of him:

"I have asked Dr. Sears to come to the Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago, and give his eloquent lecture on 'Grumbles' to our 1300 students for the reason that I wish them to hear and enjoy a clean, ennobling and profoundly sensible lecture, one which made me laugh more advantageously and more constantly than any lecture I have heard since the days of dear old John B. Gough, of whom the Doctor reminds me so much."

Winona (Ind.) Assembly—No audience was ever better pleased and more thoroughly entertained than the one which heard Dr. Sears last night.

Urbana (O.) Chautauqua—One of the best lectures ever delivered on the grounds.

Course tickets for the remaining six numbers can be secured for $1 and $1.25. Single admission seats are selling at 25 cents.

FOUR MEN HURT
IN AN EXPLOSION

Lock, Dec. 13.—A terrible explosion occurred at the Jagers gas well here Wednesday evening, and as a result four men were badly injured. The well was of about 8,000,000 cubic feet capacity and was drilled in several days ago and at the time of the explosion the men, Edward and Frank DeVoe, John Deerfield and Frank Sutton, were tubing the well. It is thought that the friction started the blaze which injured the men and burned the derrick and caused the loss of a number of tools. The loss will probably reach $1,000.

How to Make Your Own Cough
Medicine

More effective than any of the patent nostrums for curing coughs or colds is a simple remedy which you can make at home in five minutes at very small expense. Use

Granulated Sugar Syrup. 1 1/2 oz. Pinex 2 1/2 oz.

Take three-quarters of a pound of granulated sugar, add water, heat and stir until you have a thick syrup. Any drugist will sell you enough Pinex (2 1/2 oz.) for 50 cents. Mix in a clean pint bottle and shake well. Keep well corked and it will last the family for many months.

Pinex, as you probably know, is the most concentrated form of Norway White Pine Extract.

The best results from this prescription are to be had only by using the pure Pinex. All drugists have it or can get it easily on request.

NEWARK NEWSPAPER MAN IS NEEDED AS WITNESS
IN BEN DICKERSON'S CASE

Coshocton, O., Dec. 13.—When the State comes to its second prosecution in the trial of Ben Dickerson it will find it has been seriously handicapped by passing time. The year and a half which has elapsed since the murder was perpetrated has brought many changes, both in people and places, and it will not be an easy matter to reconstruct the proof on the evidence relied upon by the state in the first trial to secure conviction.

One of the hardest tasks before the state will be to qualify the dog testimony in a manner to make it acceptable to the supreme court. While this tribunal did not decide against the evidence on the work of the bloodhounds it strongly intimated that the foundation to the admission of such evidence was not laid to its satisfaction. It may be true that the breed of the dogs was not completely developed and this may be the point on which the court hangs its exception. Again it is possible the training of the dogs and their successive ownerships were not properly shown. But whatever the objection of the court, it would not give a statement, and it is to be assumed that if the state had difficulty in laying its foundation at the first trial, those difficulties have not grown less since.

The fact that the two principal dog witnesses are now in remote parts of the United States and it is doubtful whether they can be returned. Without their evidence it is hard to be introduced at all.

Mr. Woodward who brought the dogs from Dayton and who worked them over the trail, is now somewhere in Colorado. Mr. Wilson, the Newark newspaper man who held the leash of one of the animals over a greater part of the trail, is even farther away and is said now to be somewhere in California. There is no power in the trial court to compel these men to return to the state for the purpose of testifying and if secured at all it will likely be on terms through which the county will bear the expense of bringing them. This seems to put the matter squarely up to the county commissioners. If they are willing to vote the necessary money to the use of the state doubtless these important witnesses can be prevailed upon to come to the state voluntarily and repeat their testimony.

Another fact has just developed and that is that if the trial is commenced as now set, on the fifteenth of next January, it is not at all likely that Mrs. May Moran can be used as a witness. She is the important witness who testified to having seen Dickerson on the trail at points where the bloodhounds put it and it was one of the clinching facts which went far to secure conviction on the first trial. It is positively stated that for reasons not necessary to give, Mrs. Moran will at this time be unable to appear as a witness.

The final element of doubt working against the state is the increasing age of the star witness Tom McCoy. His evidence was secured with great trouble on the former trial and since that time he has doubtless not improved in mental vigor. He is credited with having told many conflicting stories about the matter since and if this can be proven the weight of his evidence would doubtless be greatly weakened.

While this time Dickerson has not Judge Voorhees and Judge Roche among his defenders, the task of the state will not be lightened on that account. Doubtless if the commissioners vote the necessary money the witnesses can be reassembled, and doubtless, too, what they shall do will depend largely upon what they conceive the people desire done in the matter. It is not likely that after all the expense that has already been made, the people will desire to have the matter end in a farce through a broken and shattered prosecution. Much has been done in the way of prosecuting a fair trial to the accused. As much will again be likely demanded to insure the repetition of a fair searching and complete investigation for the state at the coming trial.

time. It is impossible for him to do so, however, on short notice. In a number of cases. The wholesale houses are rushed as well as the retail ones, and consequently there is disappointment all around. It is just as easy to get this work done now as it is to put it off until later, and it is far more satisfactory. The holiday trade is already well under way, and it is the wise people who are furnishing it.

REAL LOVE MATCH
AMONG ROYALTY

Athens, Dec. 13.—With the splendid and elaborate rite of the Greek church, the religious ceremony uniting in marriage Prince George, second son of the King of Greece, and Princess Marie Bonaparte, was performed at the Cathedral Thursday in the presence of the King and Queen of Greece, a gathering of high state dignitaries and the members of the diplomatic corps. The civil marriage ceremony took place in France Nov. 21. The Archbishop of Athens, assisted by five bishops, officiated.

The Princess Marie Bonaparte who was born 25 years ago, has lived most of her life in Paris. She is a young woman of unusual mental attainments and is considered one of the most remarkable Princesses of the day. She not only possesses great beauty, wealth and exceptional accomplishments in music and painting, but she is a distinguished scholar.

Her marriage is said to be much more of a love match than such unions usually are. By the ceremony of Thursday Princess Marie becomes the daughter-in-law of the King and Queen of Greece, the niece of the Dowager Empress of Russia, the King and Queen of England, and the King and Queen of Denmark, the cousin of Emperor and Empress of Russia, and the King and Queen of Norway, and a close relative of all the other crowned heads of Europe. Her father, Prince Roland Bonaparte, is the oldest living grandson of Lucien, the great Napoleon's eldest brother.

Prince George of Greece was born in 1869. He was at one time High Commissioner for the Powers in Europe in Crete. His eldest brother, Prince Constantine, Duke of Sparta, is heir to the Greek throne.

WAYNE FICKLE
IS DISCHARGED

Granville, O., Dec. 12.—The prosecution by the Ohio Fish and Game Commission of Ohio against Wayne Fickle charged with illegal fishing in the waters of Buckeye Lake by setting a net, came to an abrupt conclusion in Squire Sayre's court here. The law under which the prosecution was had provided that 15 men shall be summoned as jurors and the law gives final jurisdiction to the justice of the peace trying the case. A jury was empanelled and sworn and the lawyers for the prosecution, General J. C. Speaks, John A. Alborn, assistant attorney general, and J. C. Blankenship, secretary of the game commission, stated the case to the jury, when it was discovered that they had neglected to have the defendant arraigned and plead to the charge.

The lawyers on behalf of the defense, R. G. Smythe and J. M. Swartz of Newark, insisted that no issue had been made up as required by law, for the jury to decide, when the lawyers for the state, after a long consultation, asked the court to discharge the jury, which was done. The lawyers for the defense then insisted that the defendant be discharged from further prosecution, which was also done.

Wayne Fickle is one of the oldest and best known fishermen on Buckeye Lake, and he has frequently been prosecuted by the game warden for violating the fishing laws, and in every case he has been acquitted. Fickle insists that he has not violated the fishing laws. It seems, however, that there is an antagonism between Fickle and the game warden, which has resulted in the numerous prosecutions against him.

A Revolution In Chibombia.

By GEORGE KENNETT.

Copyright, 1907, by P. C. Eastman.

The D'Estes family was one of the haughtiest in Chibombia. Papa D'Estes was a retired dictator, not yet content with that permanent rest which the cemetery affords to most Spanish American patriots of our time, and end of their official careers. His belongings were now engrossed in crumpling malodorous cigars and in lighting certain arid tracts of his interior with aguardiente. Mamma D'Estes does not count in this story save as the parent of seven sons and one daughter enumerated below.

There were Brother Alfonso, who was destined for the presidency, and Brother Juan, for the generalship of the army, and Brother Leon, for the archbishopric, and so on through the list to little Brother Cristoforo, who was to fill some older brother's place, should any elect a foreign minister instead of service at home. But the flower and darling of the household was Sister Esmerelda. She was to wed the highest official in the republic outside her own family unless indeed some foreign potentate should seek her hand.

Two gallants wooed the rose of the D'Estes, both of the Chibombia aristocracy and both of the staff from which dictators and presidents are made—Senor Caballero and Senor Lochinar. Of these two Esmerelda appeared to favor the latter, to his rival's great discomfort.

The situation irked Caballero's soul. True, he might pistol or knife his enemy returning some pleasant night from serenading his lamorata. But he knew that suspicion would at once be directed toward him and his chances of winning Esmerelda forever destroyed. He might challenge his foe to a duel, but Lochinar was a better shot than he. Decidedly things could not be worse. What was the remedy? Like a homing pigeon, he turned to the refuge of his race—a revolution.

Caballero sat himself down to think, a thing he did only on special occasions. The lines of revolutionary cleavage must be such that he and Papa D'Estes should find themselves on one side and Lochinar on the other. The smoke of his cigar furnished inspiration.

Only two kinds of tobacco are smoked in Chibombia—Bogota and La Paz. Caballero and Papa D'Estes were of the cremators of Bogota, while Lochinar clung to those who calmed La Paz. There was 60 per cent duty on Bogota, only 40 on La Paz. Here was revolutionary tinder with a vengeance. Caballero quietly kindled the flame. Soon the populace were boiling like a superheated chocolate pot. The hot blood of the descendants of the Incas must be let.

Then came the explosion. There were bells, bullets, bayonets, bricks and bluff and blithum. By day they slew one another at the barricades; by night they fraternized in the cafes over brimming flagons of aguardiente. A delicate mutual courtesy prevented any smoking.

The adherents of Bogota won. Lochinar fled to the mountains to remain in retirement until the next revolution. In a fever of patriotic excitement the duty on Bogota was abolished and the importation of La Paz utterly forbidden. Behold at last a just and stable government! There would never be any more revolutions. Everybody was puffing Bogota. La Paz was synonymous with high treason. But they still irrigated with aguardiente; nothing could prevent that.

Caballero's comet was at its zenith. The dictatorship lay within his grasp. He called Papa D'Estes into consultation and formally requested the hand of Senorita Esmerelda. He promised his future brothers-in-law the highest positions in the Chibombian state.

His daughter the wife of the dictator! His sons leading members of the government! Papa D'Estes' feelings overcame him. The seven young bloods of his house raked their sombreros a trifle lower than ever. But Esmerelda remained tearfully true to her absent lover and, despite parental urging, steadfastly repelled the advances of Caballero.

Meanwhile Lochinar was wasting no time. He pawned an ancestral gold mine and purchased 100,000 La Paz cigars and 10,000 flasks of aguardiente. These were brought over the passes on llamas and cached in a convenient cave.

A month passed, and still Esmerelda held out against Caballero. Popular enthusiasm for the new government had begun to cool.

One day a messenger brought a note to Papa D'Estes. He read it frowning, but returned a reply. That night a long black coffin was smuggled into the rear entrance of his mansion. A score of similar boxes had been secretly conveyed to the abodes of other prominent families.

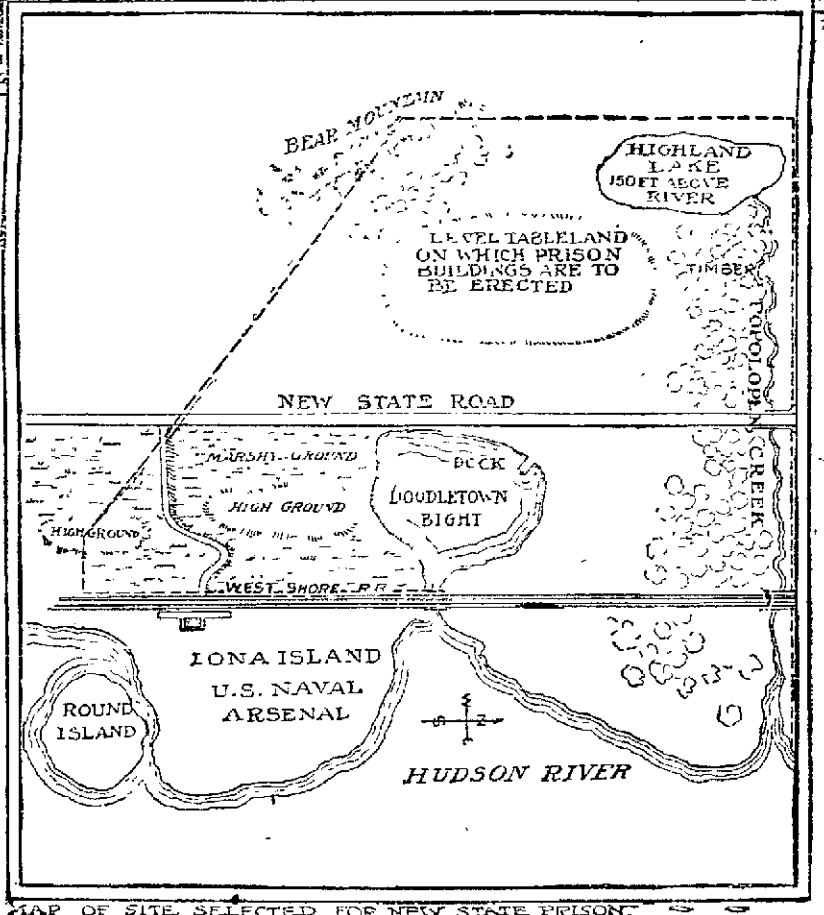

At midnight in a double barred and bolted chamber the black coffin was placed on trestles. Papa D'Estes stood at its head, and little Brother Cristoforo at its foot, while the six other brethren were ranged three on either side. The cox was opened. It was filled to the brim with cigars of La Paz. Among them nestled a deadly number of peculiarly shaped bottles.

At last a date was set for the wedding of Caballero and the unwilling Esmerelda. But as the dictator's ardor increased that of Papa D'Estes and the seven brothers perceptibly cooled. For six weeks not a roll of La Paz had been smoked openly in Chibombia.

NEW PRISON SITE IS RICH IN TRADITION.

PROPOSED SITE OF THE NEW STATE PRISON.

MAP OF SITE SELECTED FOR NEW STATE PRISON.

New York, Dec. 13.—The acquiring of a tract of 500 acres near Sony Point for the site of the new prison that is to take the place of Sing Sing state becomes the possessor of a spot full of historic interest and traditions.

Every foot of land in the Hudson Highlands has its memories of the Revolutionary war, and the spot that cold water, fed by mountain springs that drain the slopes of Bear Mountain and the Dunderberg.

"She Certainly Will Appreciate It; She Certainly Will."

Have you read "The Southern Maiden's Reply?" It is a touching little love poem by Mr. Charles Frederick Stansbury, now going the rounds. Under the magnolias the youth is telling his love in language hot as lava from Vesuvius. He speaks thoughts that breathe in words that burn to the extent of about thirty lines of verse.

"And this is what the maiden said—
Her words were choice and few:
'I certainly do appreciate it;
I certainly do.'"

One of the things that women certainly do appreciate—they certainly do—is a full page advertisement of bargains in a store near enough for them to visit. In the big cities such pages appear daily. Why? Because the merchants know that the women appreciate it. They certainly do know it.

All women are very appreciative in the matter of shopping bargains. They are so appreciative that they make mental note of the things they want, as advertised, and make a bee line for the store that keeps those things on hand and lets them know about it.

If the merchants in the smaller cities and towns—this one, for instance—would do more of this kind of advertising, the women certainly would appreciate it; they certainly would.

AND THE MERCHANTS CERTAINLY WOULD BE BENEFITED; THEY CERTAINLY WOULD.

CROWD AFTER EDITOR JONES.

Leads Him to the Mountains After Cleaning Out His Office—Had Been Invading Against the Game of Poker in His Paper.

(Copyright, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.)
Our friend, Mr. Homer Bailey of Lone Jack, called our friend, Mr.
Frank Scott of Wolf Creek, a liar the other day, and now he is nursing a shoulder penetrated by a bullet. Our friends are all liars, but it isn't considered good manners to tell each other so.

Over at Grass Valley the other day
a crowd entered the office of the Grass Valley Examiner and cleaned it out

LED THE EDITOR OUTDOORS BY THE EAR, and then led the editor out doors by the ear and headed him for the mountains. Mr. Jones was a new man to these parts. We told him when he first came that he must learn to use a gun, but he depended on a gospel hymn book instead, and the inevitable followed. He had been invading against the game of poker in his paper.

Mr. Dave Glegg, who hung around this gulch for a year or more, has got himself lynched in New Mexico and will bluff no more. There were better and there were worse men. We could have hanged him here with half the trouble.

In shooting at a stray dog the other day Colonel Miller shot and killed his horse, valued at about $200. It is funny that a cock eyed man will come to Arizona and go shooting around like other folks, but as long as they shoot up their own property outsiders can't complain.

Mr. Swift of the Red Front drug store put up the wrong prescription last Sunday, and the Chinaman who took it now sleeps on the hillside. We do not wish to say anything harsh of Mr. Swift, but as this is his seventh victim in a year it seems to us that he had better go back to the cowboy business. Roping a steer and dealing out drugs are two different things,
even among a happy go lucky people.

We are much obliged for our invitation to visit the Jamestown exhibition but we cannot attend. It's not only too far from home, but we have yet to learn how to turn off the gas when we go to bed. We smothered it out with a wet towel last time and were found with our knees drawn up under our chin.

Some one wrote us from Tombstone
last week that he would arrive here Tuesday morning to gather us to our fathers. We waited in the office all day, but the critter did not appear.
There ought to be a law against fooling with an editor's feelings. He wants to know whether the next day is to see him in heaven or still on earth.

People have begun to shoot at the clock in the postoffice corridor again.
As postmaster we wish to say that this thing must stop or some one will feel a sudden streak of redhotness whizzing through his anatomy. The dignity of Uncle Sam must and shall be respected.

Mr. Perkins of Chicago arrived here
Tuesday evening with a plug hat on.
In dismounting from the stage and entering the Royal hotel the hat received eleven bullets. Mr. Perkins called at the Kicker office later on and seemed to hold us personally responsible. We are mayor of the town, but when the boys want a little fun with a big plug hat we can't hold them down. To be entirely safe, strangers should arrive bareheaded.

Lawyer Patrick White was around town the other day boasting of the hundred thousand dollar libel suit he was to bring against the Kicker. We buckled on our guns and sought Mr.
White's office and an interview, and he promptly fell off his chair and denounced the report as without foundation. Our motto in such matters is promptness and dispatch.

patch compared.

We must ask our friends and admirers not to send us any more wild animals as presents. The wildcat that came two weeks ago has eaten up three pairs of pants and all our coat tails, and we have had to ship her off to an editor better supplied with clothing. Send us something that doesn't

We haven't said much of late about our presidential aspirations, but the Philadelphia thieves who stole the years ago didn't let the world know what they were going to do in advance. We have our ear to the ground and are mending our fences and at the proper time shall be heard of. Jim Heilso, which is us, can't be kept down on the grass.

The circulation books of the Kicker are open to all, but we want it distinctly understood that no one individual can occupy a month's time, and it would take him fully that, in trying to make out whether we have 700 or 700-000,000 subscribers. After he has been puzzling for a couple of days the shooting will begin. Send in your advertisements six months ahead if you want them properly classified.

While we were sitting on the front steps of the Kicker office the other evening in the moonlight and thinking what greatness was required in a man to hold the offices we do and run a weekly paper besides some individual came clattering down the street on his broncho and pulled his gun and fired six shots at us. None of his bullets came within two feet of us, and our reverie was interrupted for only a second. We could have dropped the smart Alcock from his saddle with ease, but the soft influence of the night was upon us and stayed our hand.

It was reported in town the other day that the wife of James Forbes had eloped again, making her seventh trip of the kind, and that he had borrowed a horse and was on her trail. It is known that Mrs. Forbes is disappointed in the town. She was formerly a waitress in a St. Louis beer garden, and she finds us a slow people and wants to get back to her own kind.

Major Williams of the Pine Tree Recorder called us a liar, charlatan and deceiver in his sheet last week, and without saying anything to any one we rode over there last Saturday to demand an explanation. He had a boy posted in the belfry of a church to watch for our coming, and we were seen a mile away. The major made for a cave in the hills and was still in hiding at last reports. We didn't intend to hurt him. In fact, we were going to present him with a child's rat tie box. M. QUAD.

as to its efficacy. We don't ask you to buy Uric-O on faith. We'll buy a large 50c. bottle for you and make you a present of it, if you will agree to take it according to directions.

We could not afford to do this if we didn't have all confidence in the world in Uric-O, and know that after you are cured you would have no hesitancy about recommending the remedy to all your friends and acquaintances who are suffering from rheumatism. This is the method that has made Uric-O famous wherever introduced. The cure of several so-called Rheumatic Incurables in a community means a steady sale of Uric-O in that vicinity. Uric-O is good for Rheumatism and Rheumatism only.
It acts upon the blood by driving the uric and poisonous rheumatic acid from the system. This is the only way Rheumatism can be cured, and it is the Uric-O way. Most druggists sell Uric-O, but if Archduke Francis Ferdinand.

Who Succeeds to the Austrian and Hungarian Thrones Upon the Death of Francis Joseph.

THE Archduke Francis Ferdinand d'Este, who succeeds to the throne of Austria on the death of Emperor Francis Joseph, became heir presumptive through the tragic death in 1889 of the Crown Prince Rudolph, the emperor's only son. Francis Ferdinand's father, the late Archduke Carl Ludwig, brother of Francis Joseph, was then next in the line of succession, but owing to his great age and his ill health—he was but three years the emperor's junior—his chances of ever inheriting the crown appeared so slight that he renounced his rights in favor of Francis Ferdinand, who was then twenty-six years old.

This sudden change in the status of the young archduke brought him at once into the fierce light which beats upon a throne. From a princely non-entity he became the head of the ancient house of Hapsburg, next to the aging emperor. Everybody wanted to know all about him. Newspapers at home and abroad began to "play him up," and fertile invention supplied details of his character and habits which the short and simple annals of his previous obscurity withheld. The most scandalous stories were told about him, and knowledge of the idiosyncrasies of other Hapsburg princes gave them quick credence in the general mind.
He was pictured as weak, dissolute, half mad. It was predicted that if he lived to wear the iron crown made from the nails which pierced the hands and feet of Christ, the most precious possession of his house, he should lose it before a year had passed. The dissolution of the dual kingdom was regarded as certain. "When Francis Joseph dies, then dies the empire," was a popular phrase. Hungary saw visions of a new Kossuth whose work would be made easy by Francis Ferdinand's infirmary, and Austria despaired.

Of a naturally retiring disposition,
the new heir apparent failed to avail himself of the opportunity to rise like a new sun to the Austrian horizon and dazzle his calumniators into silence.
Instead he kept the noiseless tenor of his way, devoting himself to study of statercraft, literature and music, appearing in public only when his presence was officially demanded. Pop-were most ripe, the Rev. Charles Nussbaum of St. Louis, who had once been a tutor of the archduke and his brother Otto, said, "I am astounded that two such fine little boys should have become the undeserving men they are said to be." They rose every morning at 5 when they were under his observation, he said, and began their studies at 6. With a short respite for breakfast at 9, they continued at their books until noon. After lunch from 1 to 3 they performed military tasks, including riding, fencing and gymnastics.

At 4:30 they resumed their studies, and at 6 had dinner. In the evening they played simple games in their mother's room and went to bed at 9. Twice a week they attended lectures at the high school that they might learn something of public school life. Their brief holidays were spent traveling under the supervision of tutors. Such a regime was not particularly likely to produce a debauchee. "No kinder hearted family, royal or otherwise, exists than theirs," said Mr. Nussbaum.

Lately a revulsion of feeling toward the archduke has taken place. His unconventional marriage to Sophie Cho-tek, a woman of unroyal birth, was a fearful shock to the Austrian court, the most aristocratic on earth, and even the people whom one would expect to regard his act as that of a true democrat thought he had disgraced his rank. But his devotion to his wife, now the Princess Hohenberg, and to his children and the absolute freedom of his life from all domestic scandal have reconciled both court and public to his condescension, and, though his sons can never ascend the throne, his mor-ganatic household is held in high respect.

Politically, too, the archduke's position has changed. Hungary was particularly hostile to him. The fact that he did not speak Hungarian had something to do with that, but as some fifteen languages and dialects are spoken in the empire Americans will appreciate his inability to talk in them all.
Hungarians called Francis Ferdinand arrogant, reactionary, and accused him of holding opinions more Bourbon than those of Louis XIV. They declared they could expect nothing of him. But when the old emperor fell ill and began

FRANCIS FERDINAND.

ular ignorance and misconception of his real nature continued. The late
M. de Blowitz gave publicity in the London Times to a tale to the effect that he stopped a peasant funeral near Prague and amused himself by jumping his horse half a dozen times over the bier, a libel which was afterward repeated in parliament at Budapest and for which there was not a shadow of foundation.

Even people of the court at Vienna related as an illustration of his lack of culture that when he attained manhood and became as much his own master as he made a bonfire of his books. As a matter of fact, Francis Ferdinand is not merely a well read man, but an author, among his books being an entertaining description of his travels, including his visit to America in 1893; several graceful por-trayments, notably one on the great field marshal Radetzky, remarkable for its high souled patriotism, and two volumes of very pretty Alpine poetry.

The archduke is also an engineer and is said to have been the only prince of the blood who ever took his diploma as such. He is of an inventive turn of mind, and his expert knowledge of machinery would have got him a good job if revolution had deprived him of his princely patrimony. Francis Ferdinand is furthermore an adept in zoology and natural history, which should appeal to President Roosevelt.
Naturally a prince who spent so much time in the acquirement of erudition had few leisure moments in which to pose as a popular idol, and as a spectacular feature of court and public life he was not a success.

Four years ago, when stories of Francis Ferdinand's alleged escapades to turn the cares of state over to his chosen successor they had to confer with the archduke.

Count Andrassy, the Hungarian minister of the interior, very recently was referred to Francis Ferdinand by the emperor when he came to Vienna to discuss an important matter of policy and after a long consultation with the archduke came away saying, "He is a man we can work with." Subsequently other high Hungarians revised their views of their next ruler, and the predictions of the paring of Austria and Hungary at Francis Joseph's death gave way to optimistic forecasts of continued union and even to expectations of Hungarian autonomy.

In Bohemia the prince has always been a favorite. He spends a considerable part of the year there, where he owns immense estates. He is very generous to the Bohemians, who appreciate his having chosen one of them to be his wife at the cost of renouncing
the rights of his descendants to the imperial throne.

In assuming the reins of empire
Francis Ferdinand will take up a heavy burden not even that the Emperor Nicholas bears, for his realm is composed of even more diverse constituents than that of Russia. Austria and Hungary are continually striving for hegemony. There is conflict between church and state. Bohemia makes daily demands for something or other.
Lithuania, Galicia and all the rest have their warring interests, and all the time Italy is thinking about the border provinces which are never spoken of in the confines of Victor Emmanuel but as "Italia Irredenta" (unredeemed Italy). Also the Balkans are sitting up and taking notice. There is deep portent in the signs of the times for Francis Ferdinand.

INEFFICIENT TAX LAWS AND ADMINISTRATION

BY ALLEN RIPLEY FOOTE.

President, National Tax Association.
Commissioner, Ohio State Board of Commerce.

A PAPER READ BEFORE THE TAX COMMISSION OF OHIO
ON NOVEMBER 11, 1907.
(Copies of this address in pamphlet form may be secured by addressing the Ohio State Board of Commerce, Columbus, Ohio.)

An intelligent study of the state and local tax laws now in operation in the several states will disclose the fact that these laws have been formulated with little knowledge of or regard for the requirements of economic principles. In this respect Ohio is not more unfortunate than many of the other states.

The Golden Rule of Taxation.

"Never tax anything that would add to the value of your state, that could or would come to your state, that could or would come to your state."—Enoch Hensley.

Article 12, Section 2, Ohio Constitution adopted 1851:

"Laws shall be passed, taxing by uniform rule all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also real and personal property according to its true value in money."

Those who formulated the existing constitution did not know that this rule of taxation which was at that date, 1851, the rule in customary use.

This rule binds the people of 1907 to the knowledge of the subject possessed by the people of Ohio in 1851.

Those who were dealing with conditions wholly unlike those existing today, an elastic rule which deprives the people of all power to deal with present-day conditions as they exist.

They may show them to be dead. Legislation, injected into state constitutions, results in the government of the present by the dead brain of the past.

It provides for no changes in conditions. Having suffered from this evil, great care should be exercised not to perpetuate it in any amendment to the constitution that may now be submitted to the people. We should recognize the fact that we are not more capable of legislating for the people who will live in this state 30 years hence than were those who lived here 30 years ago to legislate for us.

The Uniform Rule of Taxation, Applied to Real Estate.

The rule of taxation legislated into the constitution of 1851 requires the taxation of all property, tangible and intangible, at its true value in money and at a uniform rate. This is the rule of the general property tax, which is condemned by every well-informed economic student; a rule that has been tried and abandoned by the people of civilized countries excepting the American states.

The practical impossibility of assessing all property for taxation at its true value in money is due to the fact that value is not a stable condition. Any statement of value is simply an expression of opinion. It is not possible for those whose duty it is to value property for taxation to agree in their estimates of value, whether they are owners or assessors, though every one of them may be absolutely honest.

I have a watch. The law requires that it shall be assessed for taxation at its true value in money. How many of you are competent to fix that value? If you attempt to do it every one of you will give it a different value. This accounts for the impossibility of assessing the value of watches returned for taxation in this state. It illustrates the absurdity of employing a map to value all three dollars per day to value all the real and personal property within a taxing district and requiring him to have his work completed within ninety days. It exposes the egregiously folly of requiring a small body of men to meet in a room and value the property of the state, and of making their decision binding upon the state for ten years to come. What higher premium than this is offered to induce undervaluation? The county commissioners or assessors who can secure the greatest relative undervaluation for the real property of their county placed on the duplicate of their county will free the taxpayers of their county from the payment of a corresponding portion of the state tax, not for one year only but for ten years.

The same inducement to undervaluation influences the action of assessors for taxing districts within a county, and the action of taxpayers within taxing districts. The shifting of the burden of taxation, where some are undervalued, causes others to be overtaxed. This is a condition that does violence to every requirement of justice. To demonstrate how impossible it is to enforce the uniform rule in taxation by the methods that have been employed, I have had investigations made to show to what success has been achieved, after fifty-five years of experience, in Adams, Brown, Monroe and Montgomery counties. All transfers of real estate recorded in these counties for the year 1906 have been compiled. Those in which the selling value was not properly expressed were excluded from the list. The value at which each piece of property was assessed for taxation has been entered on the list in parallel column with its selling value.

This exhibit shows the average tax value of real estate in these counties to be the following per cent of its selling value:

Adams 47.4 per cent
Brown 50.2 per cent
Monroe 36.7 per cent
Montgomery 37.1 per cent

Assuming that selling value is the true value, the average tax value of the real estate in these counties is 47.4 per cent of the true value of the real estate in 1906 by undervaluation.

But this is not all that is shown in this exhibit. The statement of an average is an acknowledgment that there were valuations below and also above the average. The greater the variation in this respect the two extremes may be taken. In Adams county, 191 transfers were assessed at an average of 11.2 per cent of selling value, while 121 transfers in the same county were assessed at an average of 120.7 per cent.

In Brown county, 78 transfers were assessed at an average of 12.6 per cent of selling value, while 78 transfers were assessed at an average of 111.6 per cent.

In Monroe county, 97 transfers were assessed at an average of 10.8 per cent of selling value, while 36 transfers were assessed at an average of 107.2 per cent.

In Montgomery county, 824 transfers were assessed at an average of 12.6 per cent of selling value, while 12.6 per cent of selling value, while 122 transfers were assessed at 106.9 per cent.

If we are to have justice in taxation, some method must be found by means of which those who are overvalued can secure relief in requiring those who are undervalued to pay their fair share of taxation.

The Uniform Rule of Taxation Applied to Personal Property.

Personal property paid 30 per cent of the full value in 1852. This shows a loss of 3 per cent. It is an undoubted fact that the relative value of personal property to the value of real estate is very much greater now than in 1852, but the portion of total tax paid is 3 per cent less. But this does not show the whole truth. At the duplicate includes the valuation of personal property of public service corporations that did not exist in 1852. To the knowledge of the subject possessed by the people of Ohio in 1851, the rule of taxation which was at that date, 1851, the rule in customary use.

This rule binds the people of 1907 to the knowledge of the subject possessed by the people of Ohio in 1851.

Those who were dealing with conditions wholly unlike those existing today, an elastic rule which deprives the people of all power to deal with present-day conditions as they exist.

accumulation. This will be a direct benefit to real estate. Land has great value upon which personal property of greatest value can be induced to locate. This is demonstrated by the fact that in those counties where custom, whim and stronger than the law, has permitted the greatest evasion of the personal property tax, the increase in the value of real estate is the greatest. The value of real estate in the counties named has been:

Per Cent of Total Tax Paid by Personal Property

Real Estate Tax, 1852, 1906.

County, Per Cent, Per Cent, Per Cent.

Adams 49.9 28.9 25.7

Brown 48.0 28.3 26.6

Cuyahoga 48.0 28.3 26.6

Lucas 37.0 21.1 20.2

Monroe 42.2 21.3 21.7

Montgomery 42.2 21.3 21.7

It will be observed that the per cent of increase in the value of real estate is greatest in counties where the evasion of taxation on intangible personal property is practiced most effectively, and where the rate of the greatest development of public service corporations property.

It being true that a high tax rate increases, and a low tax rate decreases, revenue from personal property, the policy of undervaluing real estate is extremely unwise. This is demonstrated by the high tax rate in the counties where real estate is undervalued. If the valuation of all real estate, the grand duplicate of the counties investigated should be increased by the per cent which the transferred real estate is shown to be undervalued, the increased valuation (with the valuation of personal property unchanged) would result in a decrease of the tax rate as follows:

County, Valuation Rate, Per Cent, Per Cent.

Adams, present valuation 43.4 3.11

Brown, present valuation 100 1.61

Cuyahoga, present valuation 50.3 2.48

Lucas, present valuation 109 1.45

Monroe, present valuation 36.7 2.29

Montgomery, present valuation 37.1 2.61

Montgomery, full valuation 100 1.17

It is clear from this statement that to evade a part of a just share of taxation of real estate by undervaluation is unwise, and causes owners to be losers instead of gainers. They are not only charged with an increased amount of taxes through an increased rate, but they pay an increased portion of the total tax through decreasing the revenue derived from the increased rate, caused by the depressing influence of a high rate.

Growth of Taxation.

The growth of the grand duplicate and of taxes paid, state and local, from 1852 to 1907, is summarized as follows:

Grand duplicate, increase 341

Real estate valuation, increase 328

Personal property valuation, increase 270

Taxes paid on real estate, increase 347

Taxes paid on personal property, increase 1019

Population, increase, 1850-1900, 109.9

(1) These figures include the personal property valuation and taxes paid by public service corporations.

Growth of Taxation, Population, increase, 1850-1900, 109.9

For state purposes, increase, 1850-1896, 124 per cent; 1896-1906, 55.3 per cent; ratio of increase second over first period, 345.9 per cent.

For local purposes, increase, 1850-1896, 12.4 per cent; 1896-1906, 55.3 per cent; ratio of increase second over first period, 16.3 per cent.

Population increase, 1850-1890, 14.8 per cent; 1890-1900, 13.2 per cent; decrease, 10.8.

The unsound economic policy of attempting to abolish the general property tax for state purposes, by securing all needed state revenue from special taxation was entered upon by the state of Ohio by the enactment of a law assessing an excise tax, so-called, on the business of public service corporations. In 1902 the law was enacted increasing this excise tax 100 per cent, increase in the rate being from one-half to one per cent. The law was intended to increase the same time, assessing a tax of one-tenth of one per cent on the capital stock of business corporations and a tax of one-tenth of one per cent on the revenue derived from the taxation of fire insurance companies. Because the general property state tax rate was reduced from 2.89 per cent to 1.35 per cent by this means, many persons have been led to believe that the increase in taxation has been effected by "shifting the burden from farmers and small home owners to the broad shoulders of corporations more able to bear it."

These data show that there has been no actual net relative decrease in taxation, but, on the contrary, there has been an actual net increase in taxation in taxation during the twenty-year period from 1896-1906, covering the time this policy of special taxation has been in operation, as compared with the twenty-year period from 1850-1896, when none of these special taxes was being collected.

Special taxes for state purposes, whether assessed on the basis of state taxation, the result in Ohio is no different. Compare the growth of state taxation in relation to local taxation in relation to population. The answer the question. Do these results show that the present taxation policy of Ohio is economically sound? We have heard much about the policy of shifting the burden of taxation from farmers and small home owners by means of special taxes for state purposes. In 1902 when this policy was given its strongest impetus, the average tax rate in Paulding county was 2 per cent. In 1906, four years after the enactment of the Cole and Paulding laws, the average tax rate of Paulding county was 2.9 per cent. From such relief the farmers and small home owners of Paulding county may justly pray to be relieved.

Deprived of a Growing Basis of Taxation.

The requirement that all property shall be taxed on its true value in money by a uniform rate, a uniform rate, deprives the state of the benefit of a growing basis for an exceedingly large and rapidly increasing class of property—that of public service corporations. As there was no such property in 1851, it is not surprising to find that constitutional provision on taxation then adopted, is inserted in the paper taxation of this class of property. Unlike all private property, the property of public service corporations is affected with a public interest which renders valuation an illogical basis for its taxation. By giving adequate service at low rates, public service corporations render a service to the people of far greater benefit than the people can gain from any amount of taxation it is possible to exact from them. As the amount of a tax must always be taken into the account of operating expenses, the tax rate should be based on service charges, so that it may be known precisely what per cent of the service charge is taken for taxes. With this information before them, the people can determine which of two policies they will adopt—low service charges and no taxes; or high service charges and a correspondingly high rate of taxation. With gross earnings from service charges is adopted as the sole basis of taxation for public service corporations, the amount of the tax can be determined by a mechanical rule, thus eliminating the crude and unsatisfactory method of determining the amount of the tax by judicial discretion exercised by a multitude of assessors, and the tax will bear a reasonable relation to service charges.

Businessmen have the additional advantage of being a growing basis for taxation, their business is automatically and without friction the amount of the tax paid. This is clearly shown by comparing the growth of the grand duplicate with the growth of the gross earnings of public service corporations used as a basis for assessing the state excise tax for ten years, from 1896 (when the excise tax was first assessed) to 1906 as follows:

Per Cent, Per Cent, Per Cent.

Increase of grand duplicate 25.61

Increase of gross earnings 119.82

This shows how great a gain would have been made for the people if, in 1896, instead of attempting to secure increased revenue from public service corporations by the imposition of an excise tax on gross earnings of one-half of one per cent increased to one per cent in 1906, an investigation had been made to determine what per cent on gross earnings was being paid for taxation, state and local, and adopting that per cent for a gross earnings tax, the state excise tax would have been substituted for a growing basis for taxation. It would also have removed all cause of friction between the state and the public service corporations, and the state would have secured an opportunity for bribery or corruption.

A corresponding gain can be made with still greater collateral benefits by substituting for the state excise tax a property tax a state tax on the gross income from taxation of all local tax bodies in the state. The growth of the grand duplicate from 1850 to 1906 was 341 per cent. The growth of taxes collected for local purposes for the same period was 35 per cent. Accounting For Proceeds of Taxation.

Any discussion of the subject of taxation must first consider the question of a proper accounting for the proceeds of taxation is illogical and unprofitable. A proper accounting system must be devised to show:

(1) The amount of revenue derived from each classified source and the relation of such revenue to the basis of taxation, whether valuation or service charges.

(2) The amount of revenue derived from each classified source and the relation of such revenue to the basis of taxation, whether valuation or service charges.

Gone at Five

LOUISE MERRIFIELD.

"And now, ladies and gentlemen, we have this fine old piece of black walnut. Must have cost at least $75 fifty years ago. Just observe the hand carving, will you? Every one of those bunches of acorns is hand carved. Mirror real French bevel. See that initial hand carved right into the wood on top? That capital K stands for Kittredge, and this here bureau is part of the original black walnut, marble topped bedroom suit that old Grandpa Kittredge bought in Boston fifty-two years ago. Ain't that so, Mrs. Kittredge?"

Standing near the veranda steps was Grandma Kittredge, slender, erect and dignified in her mourning. Her sweet old face was tear stained, but courageous, as she watched her precious furniture go under the hammer, piece by piece. It was hard, nobody knew how hard, but they were all kind to her, and even old Billy Masters, the auctioneer, was making it just as easy for her as he could, and, standing next to her, one arm around her waist and the other hand holding hers in a close clasp of loving comfort, was Kitty—Kitty, for whose sake the old home and all it held were being sold.

With that soft, young hand holding hers the strength came back to her as she remembered what it meant for Kitty's sake each time one of the old dear things was sold, and now, even when the first piece of her wedding suit was put up, she smiled bravely, closed her eyes to force back the tears and answered:

"That is so, Billy."

They had bought it on their wedding trip—the black walnut "set," as she called it. It had been made to order in Boston, and she remembered how proud she had been of even the initial on each headpiece, the initial that she had taken for her own through life only a few weeks before.

"There's nothing too good for my bride to take back home with her," Tom Kittredge had said proudly. "And you shall have the marble tops, too, Kitty, darling."

Marble tops! And today old Billy was telling her neighbors to bid up, that even the marble tops were worth buying for gravestones; real, good, flawless marble was getting so scarce. The tears forced their way through her lashes this time, and Kitty junior, seeing them fall on the hand she held, raised it to her lips and kissed them away.

"Don't cry, grandma," she whispered. "I'll win it all back for you, dearest. Don't you cry."

Then while Billy's voice sounded far off she closed her eyes to shut out his figure standing on one of her dining room chairs, shut out the scattered crowd of old neighbors and strangers that spread out over the lawn in front of the big colonial Kittredge home—stead, and reasoned it all out with herself again—how it must be for Kitty's sake, Kitty the Third, as they had called her when Kitty the Second had laughed and cried the first time her baby daughter was laid in her arms by Kitty the First. And today Kitty the First was only poor old Grandma Kittredge, and Kitty the Second lay up under the pines in the judge's family lot on the hillside next to the judge himself, and only little seventeen-year-old Kitty was left.

It was right that the girl should have the full benefit from the old place, Grandma Kittredge told herself over and over again. She, too, would be sleeping up under the pines before long, and then only little Kitty the Third would be left, and what good would all the old fashioned furniture be to her? Dudley liked new things, and they were going to live in New York after they were married. She had heard him telling Kitty how artistically and effectively he would furnish up an apartment for her, "all in mission style."

Grandma Kittredge had wondered vaguely what the mission style was, but she said nothing. It was perfectly natural for Kitty to want her own things, just as that other Kitty years ago had wanted to go up to Boston and have the joy of buying her own things for the home wonderful. Of course Kitty the Third couldn't understand how she loved each piece of furniture. She was too young. How could she feel sad over the old bureau without the memory of the little baby garments that had been tucked away in its drawers years and years ago, of the dear old solid mirror that had reflected the face of that other bride from Boston and beside her, bending over her shoulder, the laughing, merry, tender eyed Tom Kittredge? Fifty-two years ago it was, but how could Kitty understand? But it was for the best—surely it was all for the best—Grandma Kittredge kept telling herself, for the young people wanted to go to New York to live, and she was to go too. They were very, very kind to her. She could not stay in the old house all alone, and, then, there was no money to keep it up with.

Money? She had hardly ever bothered about the word until the judge had died. There had always been plenty of money. She had never even asked how much of what was left. The judge was the judge—that was enough. His father had owned the big white colonial mansion upon the hill before him, and even the new trolley line that cut across the front lawn in the interests of modern improvements had not taken the beauty and dignity away from the old place.

spring sunshine out to the pines on the hillside they had told her gently and carefully, so as not to worry her too much, that there was no money left—that the judge had left nothing except the old home and the land it stood on.

She had tried so hard to reason it out for herself. It was not like Tom to let things go along like that and never tell her. And they had always had plenty. Kitty had gone to college with the other girls. There had never a word been said of money.

"Going, going, gone—to Miss Podmore for five." Billy's voice broke in on her reverie. "Better take that glass right off, Miss Podmore, and the marble, too, so as it won't get smashed. Dick, here, will help you. And you might as well bid up on the rest of the set. It's a shame to break it."

"Land, I don't want the heavy old stuff!" exclaimed Sue Podmore, staring blankly at the big old bureau. "My ceiling's too low for that top piece, and it's so heavy to lug around. I only bid up five because it did seem such a pity. I felt as if we were fairly insulting the old thing cheapening it so. But I don't want it."

Didn't want it when it was worth its weight in gold to her! Grandma Kittredge crossed over to where Dick Lane was trying to take the screws out of the mirror, the screws that had not been loosened for fifty-two years and came out hard.

"It's fearful hefty, Miss Kittredge," he said, tipping it up against a tree to get at the back better, and then something happened—something so amazing that it stopped the whole Kittredge auction, for as Dick's hands pulled on the hand carved, acorn trimmed bottom piece along the side it gave way in his grasp and fell out, and there in the bright sunshine lay exposed Judge Kittredge's private home bank.

"Of course, grandma, you'd do just as you please," Kitty the Third said after every one had gone and Billy and Dick had carried all the precious unsold things back to their places in the house, "but Dudley and I would love to have you live with us in town."

Grandma Kittredge smiled happily to herself and swayed gently back and forth in her little low sewing rocker that Miss Podmore had kept her eye on ever since the sale had begun.

"Well, it's real sweet of you to say so, dearie," she answered, "and I know you both mean it, but as long as there's the means to keep it with—how much did Dudley say your grandpa had put in that drawer—twelve thousand and some odd? Well, I kind of think that I'll stay right here. You can come out to visit me often, and there may be others to consider, you know."

"Others?" said Kitty the Third inquiringly. "Others, grandma?" "There may be Kitty the Fourth some day, dear heart, who would love the old place and even the furniture some day, dearie, when you are old, too, and I am up with grandpa on the hill, and black walnut furniture has come in style again."

And while she folded her arms about the girlish figure kneeling beside her the sweet old face was full of a half merry, quizzical tenderness as she added, "Some day when mission style's gone out of date, dearie, so we'll keep every dear old piece that came from Boston years ago."

Don't let the baby suffer from eczema, sores or any itching of the skin. Lozan's Ointment gives instant relief, cures quickly. Perfectly safe for children. All druggists sell it.

Fabian's Cure

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyright, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

Fabian impatiently paced the piazza. It was 8:10 and the breakfast bell had not sounded. But not because he was hungry did Fabian anathematize the cook.

He had wakened with little appetite, but ever since he had begun to order his life he had had breakfast at 8. It had been the sole recommendation of this boarding place that they had breakfast at his accustomed hour instead of 7:30, as seemed to be the custom in most of the boarding houses in Carverville.

Because Fabian always took the first two weeks in August as his vacation he followed this custom, too, though the break in the even routine of the office annoyed him. But habit was Fabian's fetish. Habit decreed a two weeks' vacation in August, and so he continued to seek a resort where the orderly routine of his life would be the least interrupted.

This year he had rather fancied Glen farm, but they had breakfast at 7:15. Fabian had inquired irritably why not 7 or 7:30 and had decided in favor of Brook farm, where meals were served at about the hours to which he was accustomed in town, though it annoyed him to have to eat his dinner in the middle of the day and a cold supper at night.

Ever since he had reached his seventeenth year Fabian had been alone in the world and he had fallen in a rut of system. His orderly habit of mind made him a valuable man in the office, but his unwillingness to depart from custom drew few friends, and at twenty-six he was still heart whole. The delayed breakfast was, a far greater annoyance than a more serious disappointment might have been, and he gnawed at his mustache as he strode up and down the piazza. He caught the first jangle as the bell was lifted from the shelf and turned to enter the house, but just then there was a scream from the road, and he turned to see a girl endeavoring to beat off the farm dog, whose muddy paws had already left their imprint upon her dainty skirts.

Something in her pose caught Fabian's fancy, and he went racing down across the grass plot to her rescue.

CARLO PICKED OUT THE SHORTEST ROUTE TO THE BACK YARD.

whistling to the dog as he went. But Carlo was determined to make friends with the girl and paid no attention to the calls until Fabian's hand rested heavily upon his collar and the toe of Fabian's boot emphasized lightly the indiscretion of accosting strange young women on the public highway.

"He's a dear old thing," smiled the girl as Carlo picked out the shortest route to the back yard, his tail tucked ingloriously between his legs. "I suppose it is more my fault than his. I walk down to the postoffice every morning, and he always barks his 'Good morning,' but today he seemed to want to shake hands, and he did not realize how dirty his paws were. You won't punish him, please."

"He's not mine to punish," said Fabian absently. He was thinking not of Carlo, but the girl. No woman had ever made strong appeal to him before, but he felt dazed in the presence of this radiant girl with the gentle eyes and the smile that made the whole landscape seem brighter. He was on his knees in the road now, trying to remove the worst of the muddy paw prints with his handkerchief. It was a clumsy effort, for he only made smudges worse, and with a laughing word of thanks the girl stopped him.

"It will be all right when it dries," she said, with her wonderful smile. "You are very kind, but it really does not matter. By the time I get back from the village it will be all right. It's just a little wash skirt anyway, and a trip to the laundry will remove all traces of the dog's impetuosity."

With a nod and another smile she started down the road, and presently Fabian pulled himself together and went in to his delayed breakfast. He sat in a trance through his brief meal and hurried back to the piazza.

After breakfast it was his custom to read the morning paper, but he sat with it in his hand this morning and did not even scan the headlines. He was watching the road for the glint of a white dress, and when it came in sight far down the road he strolled to the gate with an elaborate assumption of carelessness and was leaning against the fence as the girl came up. The dried mud had been shaken from her dress, and with a smile she called his attention to the fact. "You see it's all right," she declared.

"But I think you need a guard," he declared, with sudden bravery that startled him. "With your permission, I will form an escort to ward off dogs, dragons and other insects."

He fell into step beside her before she could refuse, and they walked briskly on. Fabian wondered if it was possible that she had been going past the farm every morning while he was at breakfast and without his knowledge. It seemed now as though he could feel her presence through stone walls. Never having been in love before, he was swinging the length of Cupid's pendulum, and he exerted himself to be entertaining. So well did he succeed that when he reached the gate of Glen farm, all too soon, Miss Semple agreed to go for a walk in the afternoon.

Fabian went into the house with her that Kerr, whom he had met the year before, might complete the introduction more formally, and even smiled when Kerr introduced him as "the human time table," with a laughing dissertation upon the exactness of his habits.

The rest of Fabian's morning schedule was completely upset, though he returned to Brook farm, and there was nothing to interrupt the even tenor of his routine save his thoughts. He could only pace the piazza and think that Marcia Semple was to walk with him that afternoon. The hours dragged interminably, but at last he could with decency present himself, and together they started for the falls.

"How much time have we?" said Marcia as they started out. "Mr. Kerr warned me that you had probably allotted a certain time to our walk and that this must not be exceeded."

"Kerr," said Fabian viciously, "suffers from softening of the brain. We are going to make this walk just as long as we possibly can."

Marcia laughed her rippling laugh that seemed to Fabian the most divine music he had ever heard, but she returned to the subject again when they had reached the falls and were sitting on the mossy bank for a rest.

"Impulse is better than system," she declared. "Now, suppose that you had not followed impulse, but had gone in to breakfast. I should not have known you and should have lost a delightful walk."

"The argument is most potent," he said gravely. "Behold in me a backslider from system."

"Time will tell," she declared. "We shall see."

But time told strongly in Fabian's favor. To hasten the cure he went to an opposite extreme. Instead of the most regular life he led the most erratic existence, aided and abetted by Marcia. The day before his return to town she declared his cure complete.

"You have not done a single thing today at the time you usually do it," she declared as they leaned over the bridge that spanned the tiny stream and let their eyes feast upon the moonlit landscape. "You did not even have dinner."

"Yes, the cure is complete," he said. "I think I rather like doing what I want to do instead of following a well ordered plan. But you have got me into worse trouble."

Marcia did not answer. Her eyes followed the ripple of moonlight across the water, and the hand that rested upon the railing gripped the wood more tightly.

"You should ask what the trouble is," he said after a moment. "Then I should tell you that instead of a schedule the most important thing in life is you. You have lifted me out of my humdrum existence into the new world of love, dear. Is there hope that some day my love will be returned?"

"I think I had better say yes," she said, with a happy little laugh. "It will insure the permanency of the cure."

"And do you love me a little?" he asked humbly.

A soft little hand stole into his. "Dick, dear," she said softly, "why else should I have worked so for your cure?"

How to Speak Correctly. Say the alphabet aloud, and when you have finished ask yourself if every letter would be perfectly distinct and intelligible to any one who might be listening. Here lies the fundamental principle of all speaking. Every element of every spoken word should be distinct and intelligible. In repeating the alphabet each letter ought to make a perfect escape from the lips of the speaker. Does it make such an escape when you say it? Do you send it out rigorously? Watch yourself as you speak each letter and see what happens to it. If it gives you the sense of hanging about your lips, or if it does not seem absolutely to separate itself from you, or if it drops into your throat, say it again and will it to go boldly out. Try to think of it as being outside yourself as a thing apart. When you succeed in thinking of it in this way, if you don't care for words or if you have never thought about them, you will have taken the first step toward the mastery of good speech. To speak well you must love words and their elements.—Harper's Bazar.

Frankness. "I believe in being absolutely frank with everybody," said the aggressive man.

"Well," answered the peaceable citizen. "I suppose that sort of thing is largely a matter of temperament. If I were as good a hand in a fight as you are, maybe I'd be that way too."

Christmas In Cactus Center.

WOMEN'S scarce in Cactus Center, and there ain't no bargain stores. Fer to start them Monday rushes that break down the stoutest doors, but we had some Christmas shopping that the town ain't over yet, jest because of one small woman and a drug store toilet set.

She was Cactus Center's teacher, and she hadn't left the stage. 'Fore she had the boys plum locoed, and I don't bar youth nor age. She was cute and smart and pretty and she might 'a' been here yet if it hadn't been for Dawson and his drug store toilet set.

It was old and scratched and speckled fer 'twas in his case fer years. But old Dawson, sharp and clever, put a whisper in our ears—'Lowed he'd sell that set at auction, and he says, "Now, boys, you bet this'll make a hit with teacher—this here swell new toilet set."

IT WAS THEN BEGUN THE SHOOTIN'.

Well, the biddin' started lively, and it got to gittin' hot. Fer every mind in Cactus on that single thing was set.

Purty soon I'd staked my saddle, worth two hundred dollars net, just to own fer one short second that blamed drug store toilet set.

It was then begun the shootin', no one seems to know jest how, and 'twas lack of ammerration that at last broke up the row, and thirteens of us was hurted, but the worst blow that we met was in findin' that some bullets had gone through that toilet set.

But we plugged the punctures in it, and we plugged the wounded, too, and agreed we'd arbitrate it, and the bunch 'd see it through. So we sent a gift committee, but they came back sorer yet, fer the teacher 'd fluttered eastward, so we have that toilet set.

CHRISTMAS NEAR THE POLE.

Where Seal Meat and Whale's Blubber Take Turkey's Place.

"I think Christmas, 1883, was my most memorable one," said General Greely, the arctic explorer. "With my command I was proceeding southward in the hope of obtaining help, and about the 20th of October we encountered ourselves in a little hut at Cape Sabine. Our supply of food was running very low, and we were on very short rations, every one being allowed just food enough in each twenty-four hours to sustain life. Under these depressing circumstances and amid the awful silence of the polar night the cheerfulness that we continued to maintain was remarkable."

"Christmas day came at last—Christmas in the arctic regions! At 6 o'clock we had our breakfast—this soup made of peas, carrots, blubber and potatoes. Our Christmas dinner was served at 1 o'clock—first course, a stew of seal meat, onions, blubber, potatoes and breadcrumbs; second course, served one hour after first, a stew of raisins, blubber and milk; dessert, a cup of hot chocolate. One of our party had some tobacco still left, and he very kindly made a cigarette for each one in our little party."

"I will wager that in all Christendom that day not another present was given or received that gave such intense delight to the recipients as did those little rolls of tobacco and paper. They were quickly aflame and being puffed away at for dear life, and thus any most memorable Christmas—a Christmas near the north pole—ended in smoke."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Vacations as Christmas Presents.

In a letter to the employees of the Bonaire Mills of Fall River, Mass., announcing the regular profit sharing dividend on Dec. 21 last, Treasurer George A. Chase said: "The board of directors has unanimously authorized me to announce to you the experiment of a vacation week in August, 1907. The mills will close Aug. 24 and reopen Sept. 3, thus allowing you ten days of rest and recreation. In lieu of regular pay you will get an extra dividend on your wages, payable just before the vacation, to the amount of 50 per cent of the average weekly wages." This promise was faithfully kept.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The Christmas Fair given by the pupils of the High School last Friday for the purpose of raising money to increase the library, was a decided success.

Not long ago the Board of Education appropriated $50 for the library with which 77 new volumes have been purchased. It is the intention of the High School to procure for works of the standard authors so as to create a love for the best in the pupils. To increase the appropriation and secure more volumes of good books the High School gave this fair. The receipts were very encouraging, being about $200. Of course there was a slight expense connected with it which only amounted to about $20, thus leaving a balance on hand of over $170.

The choice of books is to be made left with the pupils. Any pupils desiring any particular book may suggest it and if there is a repeated request for that book, and it is a good one, in all probability, it will be added to the library.

The Seniors gave a very entertaining three act comedy Wednesday evening, "The Toastmaster." About eight of the Senior girls acted as ushers and succeeded in seating the people without much confusion. This class certainly was gratified at seeing such a large and appreciative audience and also the receipts at the box office, which exceeded expectations. This money will be used in entertaining the Juniors in some way in the spring.

The players, although amateurs, were as entertaining as professionals. It was an exceedingly witty play with many new and original jokes. By bringing out the points cleverly the audience was kept almost constantly in an uproar. The make ups and costumes were worn with unexpected good grace.

There appeared in the Advocate a few days ago the statement as to the display of class spirit in the High School. This is most emphatically denied by almost everyone connected with the school. The grounds for the report probably originated in the circulation of a statement which is true. Last Friday, the evening of the Christmas fair, several Juniors and Seniors did have a meaningless skirmish over class colors which resulted in the tearing of one of the girls' wearing apparel. The people who engaged in this "fight," or as they see fit to call it, "a display of class spirit," were probably people who had not given the subject any serious thought, for it is believed if they had they would not have engaged in anything quite so childish.

Then as to the colors of the two upper classes floating alternately from the flag staff for several weeks past, all that can be said in the first place is that the High School does not possess a flag staff. To be sure the colors of the two classes were seen floating almost alternately from the top of the building for exactly two days, last Thursday and Friday, and that display of class colors has been checked entirely it is hoped.

OSCAR F. SPATE, PROMOTER.

OSCAR F. SPATE.

New York, Dec. 13.—Promoter and stormy petrel of finance is Oscar F. Spate, once the center of a nine days' storm of wonder and indignation in this city and now serving a workhouse sentence in Pittsburgh. He was sent there for attempting to obtain large fees from wealthy citizens of the place for introducing their wives and daughters into the society of the British nobility.

A man of protean phases is he, and before he went into retirement he had cultivated the drawl and the deliberate manner which are supposed to be the true sign of the well bred Englishman. New York, however, knows him best as a brisk, energetic person, full of strange notions and large schemes and the unwitting initiator of picturesque riot.

HERE AND THERE

The thermometer on Thursday stood at 6 a. m., at 22 degrees above zero.

This temperature was taken from Fahrenheit's scale, which for some inexplicable reason is the measure usually used here. It is a clumsy scale and does not express clearly what the layman wishes to know. For instance it told you that it was 22 degrees above zero, but does not express how much below freezing the temperature was. When Fahrenheit evolved his scale he got his zero by producing the lowest degree of cold possible in that day by artificial means, so at the degree that water congealed, he marked 32, so at the degree the mercury stood in the glass Thursday morning, to find out how really cold or warm it was, we must make a calculation to know it was 10 degrees below freezing.

Now in the Centigrade thermometer which is rapidly coming into use as having a more practical scale, the zero point is placed at the freezing point of distilled water, so at any place that the mercury stands, it is known instantly just how much above or below the freezing point the temperature is. All people that are interested in weather conditions, except those interested from mere curiosity, desire to know how much above or below freezing it is, and while Fahrenheit's scale is correct, it is a clumsy device as compared with the Centigrade system.

"My, but things have changed since I went to school," said a gentleman who was standing on West Main street when the High School broke loose. "If one didn't know who those finely dressed ladies and gentlemen were, you'd think there had been a social function up the street. Look at those girls going there; they're dressed like used to 'Bradley-Martin' of the season; they've got enough extra bric-a-brac on to buy a ton or so of coal for some one who needs it this season. Do the young gentlemen have to wear dress clothes when they go to class?" he asked sarcastically. "To tell the truth," he continued, "some of the parents have to take their children out of school on account of the pattern set in dress by some of the children of the wealthier class. It is foolish to do so I know, but it is human nature to want to appear well, and the kids find plenty of ways to put it in on a poor dresser. 'I remember once,' he went on, "remindingly, 'that a party of girls came to school one afternoon overdressed, and the teacher inquired if they were going to a party after school,' and when she found out that they had just put on their 'pleasant raiment' to make an impression, they were told to go home and come back dressed for business. Of course, I like to see every one dressed neatly, and of clean appearance, but the children should be taught to dress for school according to their requirements, just the same as a man has to dress to pursue his vocation."

WHY DON'T MORE MEN ENLIST?

RECRUIT BEING WEIGHED AND MEASURED

DOCTOR EXAMINING MOUTH AND TEETH

New York, Dec. 13.—Why do not der aims for three years at least, or more men enlist in the army of the United States? That question has been asked continually in the last year, and that there are reasons for it is shown by the constantly dwindling enrollment and the strong efforts being made in every direction to persuade able bodied young men of good moral character to serve their country pu-ing that they draw from a city of four millions through the gates of which are passing each year millions of men from all over the country, the lack of responses to the general invitation to enlist is surprising and baffling those who are at the head of an army already nearly many thousands less than it should be in time of peace.
